Cats Can Be Too Big
French-German Pact
Russia Bobs Up
1,250,000 Crimes

By Arthur Brisbane

THE HEADS of big corporations might visit the lion house in New York's Central Park Zoo, and sympathise with the lions.

The house is plagued with rats, and the gigantic "cats" in the cage are so big, the rats are too quick for them.

Regular cats will not stay in the cages because they dislike the smell of lions and fear their size.

Some of our biggest corporations are unable to attend to small matters in their business, and suffer heavy loss in consequence. Lions, in spite of the fact that they are big cats, are unable to look after their own rats. It is possible to be too big for efficiency.

With Britain and America getting ready for a solemn London conference, French and Germans were really attending to business in Paris. The result must have made Britons thoughtful.

"The chancellor of the German state expressed a desire to establish direct contact with the French government," so runs the official announcement.

Then "the head of the French government SPONTANEOUSLY replied that he viewed with satisfaction such an interview."

France seems to have said to Germany: "I have my heel on your head. Will you let me keep it there quietly or shall I press down hard?"

Under the circumstances Germany could only reply. "Keep it there."

But such a thing as a real reconciliation and friendship between Germany and France is conceivable. If that came about France, with her great air fleet and submarine fleet, combined with Germany, could say to England: "Your English Channel, once so important, is now meaningless. You must do as we tell you."

In that case Britain would probably turn to an alliance with this country. Plenty of possible complications ahead.

The administration hopes that lending money to Germany and encouraging other nations to do the same will help our farmers by stimulating trade and German wheat buying. That reminds you of the cowboy who said when he heard of oxtail soup: "That seems like going a long way back for soup."

Russia can undersell us and Germany may buy from Russia. It may be true, as suggested by a former head of our farm board, that American farmers must meet competition with cooperative farming. A small American tractor backing around the corners of a small field cannot compete with a Russian government tractor that goes six miles in a straight line and six miles back, a program that includes planting thirty million acres of wheat as part of one government enterprise, two and a half times the total wheat acreage of Kansas.

Russia continues to interest the world more and more. The president of the British Timber Trade Federation, after investigations in Leningrad and all Russian lumber centers, says officially "there is no forced or convict labor in northern Russian lumber ports."

He found new and better houses, conditions as compared with the days of the czar "greatly improved."

The chairman, Mr. Tetsall, head of a great English firm, confirms the statements made by one of the best known American lumber men.

Read an extract from a message sent from Moscow by Walter Duranty, who represents Mr. Adolph S. Ochs.

"In Europe there are gloom, panic, listlessness, or the first angry mutterings of despair, and unemployed by the millions. Here in Russia there are hope, energy, the fury of creation and strong leadership toward an appointed goal."

In industry Russia shows enormous gains for this year over 1930.

It might be worth while to send one of our commissions to Russia to see whether, by any possibility, they know something that we do not know.

Dr. Abraham J. Rongy, chairman of the Greater New York committee on health examination, publishes unpleasant facts in the current issue of AMERICAN HOGHOPE.

Dr. Rongy urges that legalized birth control information be supplied to all that want it in order to discourage criminal operations to prevent childbirth. He declares that 1,000,000 such operations are performed every year by physicians in the United States, and 250,000 by others not physicians, and the cost to the victims is one hundred millions of dollars.

5:30 p. m.—Attend band concert on Esplanade for reception by adults.

Boston gave Wiley Post and Harold Gatty a somewhat mixed-up but no less cordial reception today.

The pair of almost dissimilar fliers who hurled the Winnie Mae around the world in eight days were enthusiastically paraded, dined and serenaded.

The program, however, was quite seriously disrupted. Part of the parade was put on in reverse order, disappointing many, and this afternoon it was announced that those managing the fliers' tour would not permit their attendance at the Boston Garden wrestling exhibitions tonight.

Crowds cheered and threw paper, planes roared overhead, the band played "Tammany," Mayor Curley made Gatty temporary mayor and Governor Ely told both fliers he was prepared to fly around the globe with them.

LAND AHEAD OF TIME.

The mixup began when the Winnie Mae dropped out of a hazy sky onto the Boston airport at 10:45 o'clock this morning, 15 minutes ahead of schedule.

Post and Gatty took off early from Walden, N. Y., in order to avoid being fog bound and flew the 175 miles to the Hub in one hour and 11 minutes, scraping a low ceiling all the way.

Their early arrival caught the airport reception crowd flat-footed. There was only a small crowd on hand. As the Winnie Mae taxied to a stop Post grinned out of the cabin window, glanced at his wrist watch and exclaimed:

"Heil, we're 15 minutes early."

"Never crab, except when you're late," replied the phlegmatic Gatty and the two "good little men" climbed out while the small crowd cheered.

They were accompanied by T. D. Sullivan of the National Broadcasting Company, which is directing their nation-wide triumphant tour.

The band played the "Star Spangled Banner" and a crowd of about 2500 who had expected to witness the arrival began to pour into the airport.

She Smoked in Bed; Fire! Police!

She fell asleep.

When Patrolman John Fahey saw smoke pouring from the second story window of her room he rushed upstairs, broke down the door and rolled her, still asleep from the flaming mattress of her bed. He then threw the mattress into the street.

Mary was uninjured.

BROTHER OF THE CARDINAL DIES

Lowell, July 21—Luke O'Connell, brother of Cardinal O'Connell, died at his home, 36 Bay st., this city, early today following a long illness. His wife and two daughters were at his bedside.

Luke O'Connell was born in Ireland 86 years ago and came to this country when he was three. Before his marriage he lived in the house in Gorham st. where the Cardinal was born. He retired from business 20 years ago.

The funeral will be held on Thursday. Solemn requiem mass for the repose of his soul will be celebrated in the Church of the Sacred Heart at 10 a. m.

Besides his wife, Margaret, and two daughters, Sarah and Ella, and his brother the Cardinal, he is survived by two other brothers, John and Edward J., the latter superintendent of Holy Cross cemetery, Malden.

WEBB HURT; OUT OF SOX LINEUP

The iodine was in a bottle marked argyrol, an eye wash that he uses daily.

Just one drop of the iodine hit the optic and it is hoped that Webb will be able to return to the lineup before the contest is over.

HOOVER PUTS GERMAN AID UP TO BANKS

German Crisis Today

In Washington President Hoover's plan for German relief was made public by Acting Secretary of State Castle. It proposes a clearing of the European atmosphere through a feeling of mutual "good will"; the maintenance of existing credits to Germany; the conversion of present short term credits into long term credits, if necessary; appointment of an international commission to examine Germany's financial structure to determine if "new money" is really essential to the country's rehabilitation.

Sec. Stimson stated a "satisfactory meeting" had been held by the London conference today during which President Hoover's proposal was submitted to the delegates. No action on the plan was taken at today's session.

French demands for "political concessions" still delayed settlement of the German debt situation as the seven powers continued their conference.

British and American delegates reported as being ready to grant Germany immediate relief even if France fails to participate in move. Need of quick action stressed because of swift-growing unrest in Germany.

Washington, July 21 (AP)—A proposal by the American government that the bankers of the world maintain their present volume of credits to Germany has been laid before the interested powers at the London ministers' conference.

Acting Secretary Castle of the State Department made known today details of the formal suggestions approved by President Hoover for relieving Germany.

At the outset the American pro

While walking on Westland ave. Back Bay, today, Josephine Gumos, 15, of 177 Washington st., Dedham, was bitten on the right thigh by a male collie dog. She was taken to the City Hospital for treatment and sent home.

The owner of the dog, Philomena Perligrini of 85 Westland ave., was notified by the police to keep the dog under restraint until the Boston health department makes a test for rabies.

Bear Tackles Farmer in Melrose; Killed by Shot

A 400-pound bear was shot and killed today when he attacked two Melrose police officers and another man in the woods off Newburyp.rt Turnpike in Melrose.

The bear, owned by John Wierschalek, who runs a gas station at Newburyport Turnpike, broke from his chain and lumbered into the woods just before noon.

A hurry call brought Officers Brennan and Callahan to the station and they pursued the animal into the woods. When they found the bear it was mauling a Negro farm worker, who was fighting back with a pitchfork.

Brennan, after an attempt to beat the bear off, was obliged to shoot it through the head.

MYSTERY TIP NAMES TWO AS GANG KILLERS

Hunt Renewed in North End; One Is a Boxer and the Other a Gunman

The two men who took Joseph Bongiorno of the North End "for a ride" Sunday were named today in an anonymous telephone message to the Revere police.

Lieut. Cornelius Cronin immediately started for the North End to seek them, and was joined in the hunt by Sergt. Robert Mooney of the Hanover st. division, Boston.

One of the men named is a former boxer. The other has long had a reputation as a gunman.

Their names strengthened the theory that a liquor war figured in the slaying, as well as revenge for the murder last January of Carmelo Giuffre.

Another report received by police today was that Bongiorno was also engaged in a heated argument with another man in a Boston hotel Saturday.

FUNERAL TOMORROW

Gangland is expected to turn out in force for the burial of Bongiorno, and a large police detail, both uniformed and in plain clothes, will be on hand.

The body was turned over to Joseph A. Langone, Jr., North End undertaker, this afternoon on orders of Dr. William H. Watters, acting medical examiner.

Langone announced that the funeral will be from his place at 100 North st. at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow. Services at St. Michael's Church in North sq. will follow. Interment will be at St. Michael's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

TWO "MOBS" ON EDGE

Foreseeing a new outbreak of gangster killings, Boston police placed North End haunts of two rival "mobs" under surveillance and prepared to block any attempt to avenge the slaying of Bongiorno.

Watch was also established on firearms stores to prevent a raid by gang members seeking to acquire an arsenal for a fresh feudal offensive.

"Bongiorno was killed to avenge Giuffre," was the word being passed around in the North End today, according to Inspector Mark Madden of headquarters.

Swift reprisals are in order, in the opinion of the police, whether this is true or whether, on the other hand, it was a liquor feud that marked Bongiorno for death.

Lending more color to the situation, Police Chief Edward J. Tighe of Revere, where the victim's body was found, asserted that Bongiorno was bodyguard for months for Guy Parelli, alias "Kid" Morgan.

'BABY' RIVERS GIVE SECRETS OF FLOOD CONTROL

DR. STRATTON OF TECH, AT 70, HAS A TRICK

Declares That Engineers Can Harness Any Stream and Make It a Source of Good

Concord, N. H., July 21—On his 70th birthday, when most men are out of the race, Dr. Samuel Wesley Stratton, scientist and chairman of the trustees of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is working on the most ambitious project of his career.

At Wonder-Well, his hilltop summer home near Mt. Croydon, where the septuagenarian engineering authority observed his birthday quietly, he outlined plans for flood control which, he declares, will hold the nation's rivers in absolute subjection.

"In the matter of flood control America is far behind Europe," Dr. Stratton said. "The system we are developing at M. I. T. has been used successfully for years to curb the Rhine in Germany, and has made that river a mighty commercial asset instead of a menace to life and property.

MAKE A RIVER AND TRY IT.

Stripped of its technicalities, the system which Dr. Stratton and his assistants are developing at M. I. T. functions in this fashion:

A river which threatens a seasonal overflow is surveyed by a regiment of engineers until, from their calculations, they are able to return to their laboratory and construct a perfect replica in miniature of the river bed, and to gauge accurately the force of the current and its effect on the banks.

Water is turned into the model river bed, and the engineers study the action on the banks and levees.

FIND A WEAK SPOT

From their observations they are able to pick out what point the stream is most likely to break through, and to fortify the banks at the river accordingly.

The project embodies another feature—the conservation for periods of drouth of the water which formerly carried havoc and destruction over surrounding territory.

The water of the swollen stream is diverted into reservoirs, and confined until the dry season, when it is released through irrigation systems.

"I regard this as the greatest opportunity awaiting American engineers," Dr. Stratton declared. "Engineers on our staff, with government assistance, have started a survey of the Connecticut and Mississippi rivers, which annually destroy millions of dollars in property in seasonal rampages.

GET WORK OF HIS LIFE

"And I am planning my share in this work on the premise that I shall live to see it completed and working.

"Seventy years? It is nothing. I have for years planned each day's work on the assumption that I am going to live to be a hundred or more. The days of retirement at 60 or 70 are past.

"My father retired at 90 and went to California to die. To all suggestions that he interest himself in things which might happen the next year or the year after, his reply was that his life was approaching its end—that he might die any time.

"He lived to be 96.

"I shall live longer than that, and before I die I shall see the destructive waters of America's rivers dominated by scientific control."

Building Permits Take Drop in June

Washington, July 21 (INS)—Reports to the Bureau of Labor Statistics today from 344 identical cities having a population of 25,000 or over, indicate there was a decrease of 19.2 per cent in the estimated cost of buildings for which permits were issued in June as compared with May.

WORLD FLIERS WELCOMED

Air Corps, gave the famous pair an informal welcome, and Airport Supt. Albert L. Edson conducted them to the administration building.

There Maj. Paul Hines, commander of the Crosscup-Pishon Post, American Legion, was scheduled to deliver an official welcome, but the early arrival and a logy ferry prevented him from being on hand.

Park Commissioner William P. Long and Roland H. Baker, chairman of the Legion post's aviation committee, did the honors.

WALK UP TO STATE HOUSE

With a band in the lead, a cavalcade of 12 cars then bore the airmen and the greeters through Maverick and Central sqs., in East Boston, and into Chelsea sq., where Mayor John J. Whalen, accompanied by his two sons, voiced Chelsea's welcome.

The sons, John, Jr., five, and Fred, three, presented Post and Gatty with bouquets and about 1000 chestnut.

Baker, White and Sullivan rode in the car with the fliers, directly behind the band, and at Chelsea bridge a detail of City sq. station police met the group and provided escort through Charlestown and into the city proper.

The parade moved fast and was ahead of schedule and not as many spectators as were expected assembled along the route until the downtown district was reached. Through Haymarket and Adams sqs., Devonshire and School sts., the cavalcade proceeded to City Hall, where a crowd of about 1500 was assembled.

GATTY NAMED MAYOR

The fliers were escorted to the mayor's office, where they were warmly welcomed. They signed the guest book and Mayor Curley told Gatty:

"You are now acting mayor. Do anything but discharge the help or reduce my wages."

The mayor called for his straw hat and suggested that it being so muggy the fliers might prefer to walk up to the State House instead of ride, and this suggestion they approved.

Regardless of the fact that thousands of persons were assembled on downtown streets through which the parade had been routed from City Hall to the State House, the fliers with Mayor Curley, about 100 officials and semi-officials and the band marched directly up School and Beacon sts. to Beacon Hill.

Their early arrival there found only about 500 assembled in Beacon st. and on the edge of the Common. Governor Ely chatted informally with the airmen, told them he was prepared to fly around the world if they would pilot and navigate and then presented them with gold state seal stickpins.

PARADE DOWNTOWN STREETS

Word of the disappointment of crowds downtown had by this time reached the officials. The automobiles were hastily reassembled and the parade program was picked up where it was broken off by the march from City Hall.

Post and Gatty rode on the tonneau of the third car in line with Mayor Curley between them and his son, George, in front.

The parade took a belated turn through Washington, Water, Devonshire, Franklin, Bromfield, Tremont and Park sts., and although many had become tired of waiting for it to pass, the noonday lunchers quickly assembled to make an excellent showing.

The airmen went to Hotel Statler for a brief rest before going to Hotel Bradford to attend luncheon as guests of the Crosscup-Pishon Post.

FLEW OVER BOSTON.

At luncheon Gatty revealed that on the first leg of their roundthe-world flight, from Roosevelt Field to Harbor Grace, N. F., he and Post had flown over Boston.

"I imagine you were all asleep at the time," he said.

Post, having lunched on ham and vegetable salad in which there were some baked beans, expressed his relief at not having to eat chicken and green peas, and admired the Boston baked beans even if they were cold. He said he had only one trifling fault to find with the luncheon—that tea was not served.

"Sir Harold," he said, referring to Gatty, "must have his tea."

STATUES TO FLIERS.

A concert at Parkman bandstand entertained a crowd until the arrival of the official group for a presentation of bronze statues, "Viking" and "Liberty," to the airmen by Mayor Curley.

An historical tour of the city, with a visit to Admiral Byrd's Antarctic ship, City of New York, followed. A dinner at Marblehead, a concert and reception on the Esplanade completed the program.

THEBAUD WILL RACE ELSIE

Gloucester, July 21 (AP)—A race between the schooner Elsie, defender of 10 years ago and last of the veteran racing fishermen, with the Gertrude L. Thebaud, prominent international sailing champion of the North Atlantic, will be sailed late this afternoon.

Gloucester expects the race to give the Thebaud a shakedown and general tuning up for her expected meeting in October with the Canadian champion Bluenose. The Thebaud defeated the veteran Lunenburg salt banker off Gloucester last year.

LOVE SONG WOE IN GYPSY RAID

The gypsy love song turned to a wail of woe in Framingham when prohibition agents seized 96 bottles of beer in a gypsy camp during the exciting peak of a wedding feast.

Men, women and children were reeling in the gypsy dances, according to the agents, who arrested Louis S. Johnson of New Bedford on a liquor charge.

The Romany road to camp and the beer were discovered by agents when they traced a truck.

Shots Halt Four in Speeding Auto; Arrests Believed to Clear Up Holdups

Middleboro, July 21—A series of bold holdups on the lower South Shore and Cape Cod were believed cleared up today by police as they arraigned in Middleboro court a Wareham girl and three men, all Bravas.

In belief of state troopers at Middleboro barracks, Miss Bessie Barkos is the "inspiration" of a gang of bandits and burglars whose arrest has been sought for weeks.

She and the three men with her were captured yesterday by state troopers after a thrilling 10-mile chase across Plymouth county, during which 25 shots were fired.

A tentative holding as a material witness kept the girl captive, while the men were charged with robbery while armed and assault upon three officers, with intent to kill.

The men under arrest are: Domenic Mendez, 20 years old, of Wareham; John Lombard, 35, and Arthur Jones, 38, both of Bridgeport, Ct.

The capture came late yesterday after the assault of a resident of South Carver. The assailants made their escape in a car bearing Connecticut registration plates.

Three state troopers from the Middleboro barracks picked up the trail at the Myles Standish game reservation and followed it for 10 miles along a dirt road that made fast driving dangerous. The troopers were John G. O'Brien, Arthur J. Sheehan and William Smith.

Convicts Himself by Plea in Court

Hugh McGuinness, 32, of Moscow st., Quincy, attempted to argue his own case in Quincy court today, but his success was nothing to boast of.

"Sit down," you're still drunk," said Judge Albert Avery.

McGuinness sat down and heard himself sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. He could not appeal because he had a suspended sentence hanging over him for a recent drunk conviction. His brother Daniel, who didn't try to argue, was given one month and appealed.

Probation for Mother Who Bit Her Son

Lowell, July 21 (AP)—Charged with having bitten her 15-year-old son, Nicholas, on the shoulder, Mrs. Katherine Georgoulis, 38, was placed on probation in district court today when arraigned on a charge of assault and battery. Mrs. Georgoulis, mother of nine children, told Judge Fisher she was so disturbed because of the lad's failure to return home at his accustomed time last night that she could not explain her action.

FEAR NEW GANG WAR KILLINGS

Perelli is known as "the man with a charmed life." Six times he has been a target for revolver, shotgun and machine gun fusilades.

Since the last attack on his life in December, when a shotgun raked his automobile on Hanover st., but missed him, although he was in the car, Bongiorno has been constantly in his company, Chief Tighe said.

"I have information that Bongiorno was with Perelli during all the court sessions at the latter's trial early this year for carrying a gun, on which charge he was acquitted," said the Revere chief. Other information in his possession, as yet unverified, is that Bongiorno attended the trial of Carmello Guiffre, alias "Goody" Campbell, North End gangster, when Guiffre was tried and found not guilty of slaying Nate Lerner of Malden at the shooting affray in the V. F. W. clubhouse at Revere last fall.

Guiffre was slain soon after his acquittal.

Whether or not the shooting at the veterans' clubhouse started the present feud, Chief Tighe believes it possible that another battle, over a hi-jacking early Sunday morning, may have figured in the Bongiorno killing.

Efforts by Revere inspectors to learn if Bongiorno took part in this hijacking, which was successful, have as yet proved fruitless.

LOAD STOLEN AFTER BATTLE

This hi-jacking took place at 2 a. m. as a liquor-laden truck was leaving a garage, it was revealed today.

Three men on the truck fled under a volley of pistol shots and four men sped off with the valuable cargo, according to facts gathered by police.

Two hours later Bongiorno's body was found in an automobile in Revere under a tarpaulin such as is used to cover liquor cargoes.

The "tip" received by Revere police today, naming the "slayers," dovetailed with information previously obtained by Chief Tighe's men.

The police had learned that the gunman named in the telephone tip was one of the guards driven off the liquor cargo when the hijacking took place.

It was for this reason that the tip was eagerly investigated. An East Boston bootlegger also is being sought.

FOUND IN WITH PERELLI

Inspector Mark Madden, leader of the North End investigation, said today he was positive Bongiorno was Perelli's associate in recent months, although Perelli is reported to have denied this last night through friends.

"The two men were bosom friends, running mates, and I can prove it," said the Boston inspector.

Not only the police but gangdom itself today freely predicted swift avenging of Bongiorno's death unless police force his friends to lie low.

It was six months, almost to the day, before Guiffre's death was avenged—if Bongiorno really was slain as a reprisal for that killing.

According to Inspector Madden the death ride which ended Bongiorno's career started early Sunday afternoon from the corner of Fleet and Hanover sts., North End. Bongiorno rode away in the back seat of a flashy red car, with two men who had picked him up for a ride. He finished the ride in a big and almost new green sedan, in which his body was found in Revere.

"HIGH AND HANDSOME."

The man who was marked for death had just given his brother Paul, who is 31, $5 and promised to meet him again in 24 hours, but when Paul returned yesterday his brother was in the morgue.

The two brothers were as different as they could be. While Paul was a farmer and seemingly satisfied with his rural life in Byfield, Joseph was "riding high and handsome" and had at least $700 in his pockets when he started away from the North End Sunday.

'RED FLAME' OUT HUNGRY, BUT FIGHTING

Ann Berlak, 20-year-old "Red Flame" of the Rhode Island textile strikes, was released on her own recognizance today by immigration officials at East Boston—and declared she was "going right back and make things as hot as before."

"I'm going to get right on the firing line," she said, "and organize the strikers in other mills if conditions so warrant.

"My arrest was a great surprise to me, because I have always been a citizen. I'm glad to get out of that place. The food is not so good."

BRINGS CHURCH RECORD.

Her release came after her counsel, Harry Hoffman, submitted to George Y. Parker, head of the legal department at the immigration station, a document purporting to be the strike leader's baptismal certificate from a Pennsylvania town.

The baptismal certificate records that Ann Berlak, as she is known, was born Anna Berlak in 1911, in Pennsylvania, which blocks contention of the immigration authorities that she is an alien.

Despite release of the "Red Flame," investigation of her case will be continued, Mrs. Anna C. M. Tillinghast, immigration commissioner, announced later today.

MANY BACK AT WORK

Meanwhile quiet prevailed in the strike zone, with workers reported returning to mills in Providence and Pawtucket.

Overseers at the Weybosset mills in Olneyville said 500 workers filed through the gates this morning, following a vote taken under the auspices of the Olneyville Business Men's Association.

At the Royal Weaving Co. mill in Pawtucket 60 striking workers returned to their tasks, swelling the number which has been growing steadily the past week. It is now estimated that between 450 and 475 operatives have returned to duty.

BOSTON BOY OFF ON OCEAN TRIP

York Harbor, Me., July 21 (AP)—The 31-foot yawl Noddy, skippered by William H. Bacon, Jr., 19, of West Newton, Mass., a junior at the University of Nebraska, with one seaman aboard, sailed today for England.

Bacon and Harold Matthews, an experienced sailor, plan to follow the coast as far as Newfoundland and then strike off along the steamer lane to England.

Supplies for a month were carried and in case of calm or heavy weather the two expected to rely on the auxiliary engine.

Dorchester Boy Is Killed at His Play

Little Peter Faherty, 3, of 5 Mercier ave., Dorchester, died at City Hospital today of injuries sustained when he fell five feet into a cellar of the foundation of a house under construction at Alcie rd.

The boy was playing with others around the excavation when the accident happened. Patrolman Mark Gillicuddy of Fields Corner station took the younster to the hospital.

Dinehart, Actor, Must Pay Wife $100 a Week

New York, July 21 (AP)—Alan Dinehart, actor and playwright, was taken to task today by Supreme Court Justice Schmuck for attacking his wife's divorce suit with the claim that he was a resident of Chicago. The court ordered the actor to begin paying $100 weekly temporary alimony and said if payment were not forthcoming speedily the amount would be raised to $300 weekly plus $5000 counsel fees.

Alan Dinehart

Permanent alimony will be fixed after hearings into Dinehart's financial condition. Dinehart was ordered to produce a bond of $10,000 to guarantee expenses of a referee's hearing.

California Heiress Again Faces Divorce

Redwood City, Cal., July 21—Twice a divorcee is the prospect faced by Mrs. Walta Linforth Threlkeld Ewald through a suit filed by her husband in superior court yesterday. In a complaint against the heiress daughter of Walter K. Linforth, wealthy attorney; Philip F. Ewald, San Francisco business man, charges his wife with extreme cruelty and "desertion."

Mrs. Ewald

As Walta Linforth, a debutante of 18, she startled California society in 1925 by marrying William F. Threlkeld, a man twice her age, who had formerly been a stable master for a Los Angeles banker. She divorced him in 1928.

Reed Recuperates and Goes Fishing on Border

Duluth, Minn., July 21 (AP)—Former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, taken ill on a train en route to Duluth Saturday and confined to his hotel Sunday and Monday, left today for the Lake of the Woods country on the Canadian border for a fishing trip.

The former senator had a slight attack of indigestion Saturday, his doctor said.

Reed termed President Hoover's moratorium "sheer foolishness," stating it laid a heavy financial burden on the taxpayers "at an exceedingly inopportune time."

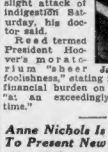
Anne Nichols Is To Present New Play

New York, July 21—After an absence of two years, Anne Nichols, who acquired a fortune by writing and then producing "Abie's Irish Rose," is to return to Broadway again in the role of producer.



Anne Nichols

Miss Nichols, who confounded the critics by demonstrating that "Abie's Irish Rose" was something the public wanted, plans to produce a play by Ralph Henry Meare this fall entitled "Band Concert."

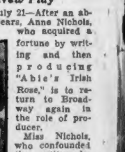
Her own show achieved a record for continuous performance of more than five years, after the majority of the theatrical critics had declared it to be a dramatic "washout."

Handshaking Fails to Get Hindenburg's O. K.

(Copyright, 1931, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin—President von Hindenburg does not approve of the "shake hands" idea in vogue in America. An audience with the head of the nation should be exclusive enough to be a distinction, he believes.

An exception is made, however, in the case of old World War veterans. When these are lined up, the "Herr Feldmarschall" often goes out of his way to shake hands with each and every veteran.



President von Hindenburg

The President's devotion to his family is touching. Be it the wedding of a grandson, the confirmation of a granddaughter or the [illegible] of a nephew—Hindenburg will be present.

MEDFORD WIFE OFF TO VIEW REMAINS

Two Who Deserted Boat at Hull Are Sought; a Mysterious Phone Call Gives Clue

The dead man was tentatively identified as Thomas E. Pents, 38, of Main st., Medford, a mechanic who, according to his wife, was visited yesterday in mate repairs on a motorboat somewhere off shore.

According to Medical Examiner John A. Peterson of Hingham, who made a cursory examination of the body, the death was "very suspicious."

Dr. Peterson was in conference today with Asst. Dist. Atty. William R. Kelley, acting in the absence of Dist. Atty. Winfield Wilbar, and it was expected that an order would be issued immediately for an autopsy.

DEAD FOR HOURS

Walter Jacobson of Newport st., Hull, in whose name the boat is registered, and another man whose name was given as Fred Clark of Boston, conveyed the body ashore and summoned medical aid, stating that the man was dying of monoxide poisoning.

Dr. Walter Sturgis and a fire squad with an inhalator were summoned. Dr. Sturgis then discovered that the man had been dead two or three hours.

Dr. Peterson was called and took charge of the body. Jacobson moored his boat in Baker's yacht basin, Quiney, and, with Clark, disappeared.

Commissioner of Public Safety Henry Stevens was unable to find Jacobson at his home this morning. The commissioner declared that the boat was a known rum-runner.

WIFE GOES TO SCENE

Commissioner Stevens, the medical examiner and the district attorney's office are anxious to ask the two men why they reported Pents to be alive when he had been dead for hours. They are also anxious to learn, from the autopsy, the exact manner of death.

Mrs. Pents, summoned from her home in Medford, was hurrying to Hingham to make the identification. Pents was the father of three children and was a free lance mechanic, specializing in motorboat work.

Editor Ray Long to Retire October 1

New York, July 21—Announcement was made today by Ray Long that he would retire on October 1 as president of the International Magazine Company and Editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine.

He will be succeeded by Harry Payne Burton, formerly editor of McCall's Magazine and at present editor of Physical Culture and consulting editor of Liberty. Long will become chairman of the board of Richard R. Smith, Inc., a book publishing concern which he founded a year and a half ago in partnership with Mr. Smith.

ELY IS BACK FOR LAWLER FIGHT

Gov. Ely, back today at his desk after an absence of 10 days, declared he had not given the controversy between Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman and Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry any thought.

"I have not been back long enough," he stated.

The Governor indicated he did not expect to submit any appointments to the council when that body meets tomorrow.

Questioned on the indirect opposition to his appointment of Dr. James J. Lawler of Cambridge to the State Board of Registration in Medicine, the Governor said Lawler is acceptable to Dr. Charles P. Sylvester, chairman of the board. Whether there is merit in the opposition, he said, must be determined by the council.

Approximately 150 telegrams have been received in addition to many letters expressing opposition to Lawlor.

CARE OF TURNER UNDER INQUIRY

Augusta, Me., July 21—The medical treatment given Benjamin H. Turner, life-term slayer, during the two days preceding his death at the State hospital while on a hunger strike was under review today by Medical Examiner Dr. Roland L. McKay.

Until this inquiry is completed Dr. McKay will not make a final report on the results of his autopsy.

County Atty. H. C. Marden announced today, after receiving a preliminary report from Dr. McKay, that no criminal action will be taken in connection with the slayer's death.

It is understood, although not officially announced as yet, that the autopsy revealed no evidence of mistreatment.

Bruises and scratches on Turner's body were only such as any person might have and were disregarded by the medical examiner in his report, it is said. The condition of the vital organs indicated good circulation of the blood. There was no evidence of foreign matter in the lungs.

FLYING MAYOR NOW

A world girdling flier, Harold Gatty, became temporary mayor of Boston today. Mayor Curley conferred the honor on Gatty when the fliers arrived at City Hall. Here he is greeting the hero airmen.

CRASH LAID TO WILD FLIER

Newington, Ct., July 21 (AP)—The identity of the civilian pilot who flew straight at a squadron of six army planes, resulting in a mid-air collision and two fatalities, today drew the attention of investigators.

Lieut. Benjamin F. Lowery of Eopocee, Tenn., pilot of one of the planes, and his observer, Corp. Harold Strosnyder of Wichita, Kan., lost their lives. Lieut. Francis X. Kelly of Brooklyn, N. Y., pilot of the other plane, and Sergt. David L. Spicer of Halifax, N. S., his observer, leaped to safety with parachutes.

Maj. William O. Ryan said he would report the civilian plane was identical to that piloted by Jack Lenox, deputy state commissioner of aeronautics.

Lenox was flying a state plane, but declared he was several hundred feet below the army planes and swerved as he passed them.

State Aviation Commissioner Morris denied that his deputy could have been involved.

HEIR PUNISHED IN WILL OF MRS. HENDERSON

"Nothing From My Estate," Is Word Left; $100,000 to Secretary, Now Dead

Washington, July 21 (AP)—A will by the late Mrs. John B. Henderson cutting off her foster granddaughter and leaving the bulk of her estate to Frances and Henry N. Arnold of New York, her niece and nephew, was filed today.

The son did not mention the amount. It was signed by the 87-year-old widow of Senator Henderson of Missouri last April.

It bequeathed $100,000 to Jesse Shinn, Jamaican private secretary to Mrs. Henderson, who died last week at her summer home in Bar Harbor, Me.

"It is my wish and I so direct," the document read, "that Beatrice Henderson Wholean (the foster granddaughter) shall have nothing from my estate."

Mrs. Wholean attempted to block a long ambition of Mrs. Henderson to give the nation a permanent home for vice-president. It was then Mrs. Henderson revealed that Mrs. Wholean was an adopted foundling.

Mrs. Henderson also left $5000 to Representative Gibson of Vermont.

The will said Mrs. Henderson had executed a certain irrevocable trust fund, totalling $85,000 for Mrs. Wholean in 1926. This, together with such income as Mrs. Wholean might receive from the estate of John B. Henderson, Jr., Mrs. Henderson said, "is ample for support."

PISTOLS DRAWN IN PRIMARY ROW

Jackson, Miss., July 21 (AP)—Adjournment by pistols of a meeting of the Issaquena county election commissioners was described here today by L. C. Dulaney, the board's chairman, when he asked Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo to send guardsmen to "protect the commissioners."

The board met to purge the books of unqualified voters for the August 4 state primary. The commissioners had voted to retain the name of two voters who had moved from the county but who, perhaps would move back again.

At this point Lester Brown, chairman of the Democratic committee, drew his gun. J. S. Myres, circuit clerk, and Alford, pulled their pistols, as did others. Then the meeting adjourned.

Issaquena county's population is largely Negro, with only a handful of qualified voters, but it is a troubled spot in Democratic primary races.

CROPS MENACED BY HOPPERS

Washington, July 21 (AP)—One of the most serious outbreaks of grasshoppers in a decade has added to the troubles of the Western farmer.

A large increase in infestation as the result of last year's drouth has been noted throughout the country, but the chief damage has been done in South Dakota, Nebraska, eastern Colorado, Idaho and western Kansas.

With an area of 11,000 square miles invaded in South Dakota, appeals have been made to the Agricultural Department for funds with which to combat the insect.

Extensive fields of wheat have been destroyed. Fears are now felt that corn may be attacked. Cutworms also have been unusually prevalent this year throughout the Middle West.

Crooks Steal While Victims Make Merry

Quincy police are investigating three robberies reported today as having taken place while persons were away on vacation.

Daniel W. Fisher of 48 Thornton st., Wollaston, told the police his home had been entered by forcing a door, and a watch valued at $25, and $5 in cash in a small bank taken.

A. W. Gardner and Hector Goudette, both of 124 Fenno rd., Wollaston, reported their flats entered while they were away. Three watches valued at $125, two bracelets, several stickpins and medals were stolen.

Grass-Eating Girl Eats Real Food

New York, July 21 (INS)—Vivian Dow, 25, is in a hospital today, free to order anything she liked to eat. Police found her in a park eating grass. She told them grass had been her only food for more than 30 hours.

QUITS LOVING BEEF BARON

WOMAN SUES IN ZONING FIGHT

Petition to the Supreme Court, asking revocation of the action by the Boston Board of Appeals in granting application of Elias Galassi to convert the first floors of two apartment houses in Audubon rd., Back Bay, into stores, was filed today by Mrs. Emma L. Coleman, owner of property at 509 Audubon rd.

Mrs. Coleman cites that the building commissioner refused Galassi's application, but that the Board of Appeals overturned this ruling.

She declares the section is generally residential, made so by the zoning laws of 1924, and that the board of appeals has no right to vary the application of the zoning laws.

It Was All for Love of Chuck Winn's Dog

Laconia, N. H., July 21 (AP)—Chuck Winn, 84, for many years a familiar figure in Laconia, didn't want to go to the county farm for various reasons, principally because he couldn't take his dog. Neither did the city want to continue paying $10 a month rent for the tenement occupied by Winn.

As a result, Winn today became the occupant of a city-owned cottage erected especially for him on Lake Winnisquam.

THIEF ALL SET TO DOLL UP

Police are looking for a burglar with a taste for expensive neckties and socks. He entered the premises of the Brownie Shoppe, Inc., Park sq. building, during the night and got away with $100 in cash and goods valued at $800.

The break was discovered by Miss Esther Johnson, the proprietor, when she opened the shop for business today.

WOMAN IN WOOL DIES FROM HEAT

One death was reported today as a result of the heat, made more disagreeable by humidity of 84, 14 above normal.

Mrs. Emma Jenness, 81, of 10 Baldwin st., Lynn, collapsed and was dead on arrival at the hospital. Medical Examiner Breed said death was caused by heart failure induced by the heat. Mrs. Jenness was entirely dressed in woolens.

In Springfield a near record for humidity of 97 per cent was reported, a figure exceeded only once in recent years.

Forecast: Partly cloudy; possibly occasional showers tonight and Wednesday; somewhat cooler Wednesday night; westerly wind.

Has Another Now

"Miss America of 1925," who was Fay Lanphier, and in 1928 was for a month Mrs. Sidney Spiegel, Jr., of Chicago, is now Mrs. Winfield J. Daniels of Oakland, Cal. And to make it seem more romantic her present husband is her childhood sweetheart.

HATHAWAY GIN MAN FINED $100

He was fined $100 and appealed.

Vernon V. Galvin, Hathaway's one-time pal and chief Government witness at his trial, was called to testify that he bought gin from Mayes on the murder night, but he exercised his constitutional rights and refused to testify.

He successfully argued that the possession and transportation of liquor was a federal offense and that he could refuse to testify on the ground that he might damage himself.

Miss Helen Burke, official stenographer, read Mayes' admission that he sold liquor to Galvin, who was accompanied by Hathaway, on the night of March 24. And that he previously had sold Hathaway a bottle of gin.

Frank M. Sylvia, Mayes' attorney, told Judge Benjamin Cook that his client had been promised immunity by both Massachusetts and Rhode Island officials for his testimony at Hathaway's trial.

1600 Homes Tremble, Due to Mine Work

Brussels, Belgium, July 21 (AP)—Residents in the vicinity of the Charleroi coal fields fear the earth is going to swallow their houses.

Mining operations are blamed for damage to 1600 houses, many of which seem about to collapse.

1 DEAD, 3 SHOT IN RUM BATTLE

Kansas City, July 21 (AP)—John Calio, 23-year-old gunman, was slain in a raid on an alleged bootleggers' rendezvous here last night after he shot and wounded two federal prohibition agents and a city detective.

Curtis Burke, 35, an agent, was struck by two bullets which paralyzed him from the waist down. He was reported in a critical condition at a hospital. A fellow-officer, E. C. Anderson, and Clarence Reedy, the detective, were wounded less seriously.

Lieut. E. C. Nelson, also a detective, shot Calio to death in a fight for possession of the officer's sawed-off shotgun.

Joseph Lusco, who raiders said was the ringleader of eight men arrested, suffered an injury to his head in the melee. M. P. Wilson, a negro youth, who was watching the raid, was struck by a stray bullet.

Dorade Near End of Transatlantic Race

Plymouth, Eng., July 21 (AP)—The American yacht Dorade, one of the ten small vessels in the transatlantic race from Newport, R. I., to Plymouth, passed the Lizard at 7:25 a. m. (4.25 D. S. T.) today.

If conditions are favorable the Dorade should reach Plymouth late today. She is the first of the competitors to reach the English Channel.

The American proposals were confined to banking operations. It was suggested that the maintenance of the present levels of credit be supplemented with continued measures by Germany to stem the internal tide within that country.

PROPOSES INQUIRY.

It proposed the establishment of a committee of the Bank for International Settlements or through other means to secure co-operation in consulting world banking interests for renewal of short-term credits, co-operation in an inquiry to determine Germany's further economic needs and the study for the conversion within six or eight months of a part of the short-term credits into long-term credits.

Castle estimated the total of the short-term credits at $1,200,000,000, one-half of which is held by American banks.

The plan had already been submitted by Secretary Stimson to the French and Germans Saturday. He said it had been received in a friendly spirit by the British.

The text of the American proposal follows:

"The essence of the problem is the restoration of confidence in Germany's economic life, both in Germany and abroad.

"1—On the political side the United States hopes that, through mutual goodwill and understanding, the European nations may eliminate all friction so that the world may rely upon the political stability of Europe.

STRAIN TOO MUCH.

"2—On the economic side, the present emergency is strictly a short term credit crisis. Fundamental pressure upon German economy during the period of depression has been relieved by the joint action of the creditor powers in suspending all payments upon government debts during the period of one year. But Germany has financed her economic activities to a very great extent through the medium of short term foreign credits.

"There is no reason to doubt the soundness of the basis upon which these credits rest, but the general uncertainty which has prevailed for the last few weeks resulted in such a loss of confidence that the German banking and credit structure was subjected to a very severe strain. This strain took two very definite forms, both of which resulted in a drain of banking resources and the depletion of German gold and foreign exchange holdings.

"In the first place there was a flight from the mark within Germany. In the second place there was a withdrawal of foreign deposits and a curtailment on the part of foreign banks of outstanding lines of credit.

CAN MEET PROBLEM

"3—Fundamentally there is nothing to justify these movements and if, through co-operative action, they can be arrested, there is no reason why the present emergency can not be immediately and definitely surmounted.

"(A) as to the first, namely, the international flight from the mark, this can be and is being successfully combatted by the vigorous action of the German Government and the Reichsbank. Once unreasonable fear has been eliminated, it is certain that the patriotism of the German people can be relied on to prevent the destruction of the credit of their own country.

"(B) As to the external credits, we believe that the first approach to this problem is the development of a program that will permit the maintenance for an adequate period of time of the present outstanding lines of credit. In this connection it is our understanding that this volume of credit, together with the freed reparations and the natural gain from the alignment of the panic, should be adequate to meet the needs of German economic life for the immediate moment.

"On the other hand, it must be apparent that, unless provision is made for the maintenance of these credits, an attempt to provide new ones, whether of a short or long term character, would be ineffective.

"In the development of such a program the governments of the countries having principal banking centers, including the United States, Belgium, France, Great Britain, Holland, Italy, Japan and Switzerland, and other important banking centers, might well undertake to encourage their bankers so to organize as to permit the maintenance for an adequate period of time of present day outstanding lines of credit to Germany.

"The responsibility for working out the details of such a program and the methods of making it effective with due regard to the protection of the banks and the needs of German economy should be left to the banking communities of the respective countries and the central banks could, we believe, be relied on to furnish the necessary leadership, co-operation and direction.

CAN SPEED RELIEF

"Such voluntary arrangements should be supplemented, for the time being, by strict control of all foreign exchange transactions by the Reichsbank so that the integrity of the program can be maintained and the banks that are participating can be assured that there would be no arbitrary withdrawal either from within or without Germany.

"It is our belief that if such a program could be made promptly effective it would result in an immediate restoration of confidence and that in a comparatively short time the necessity for restrictions of this character would disappear and normal conditions would once more prevail. There is all the more ground for faith in such a result in view of the fact that the United States debt suspension program has now become effective and that the events which succeeded the announcement of that program clearly demonstrate that relief from payment of inter-governmental debts established in the minds of the business world the basis for renewed confidence.

CO-OPERATION NEEDED

"[—A committee should be selected by the bank for international settlements or created by some other appropriate method to secure co-operation on the following questions:

"(A) In consultation with the banking institutions in the different countries to provide for the renewal of the present volume of outstanding short term credits from those countries.

"(B) In making an inquiry into the immediate further credit needs of Germany.

"(C) In the development during the course of the next six or eight months of plans for a conversion of some proportion of the short term credits into long term credits."

Castle, in outlining the President's proposal, said Mr. Hoover was aware that the German economic situation was complicated by political considerations, but that the United States would continue its historic policy of friendliness to all nations.

This government, he said, cannot thrust itself into political questions.

Acting Secretary Mills of the Treasury talked with Secretary Stimson over the transatlantic telephone after the London conference and said the secretary reported a "satisfactory meeting."

French Stand Delays Agreement on Debt

London, July 21 (AP)—America's position in the economic crisis which has enveloped Germany was presented this morning by Secretary of State Stimson in the seven-power conference for alleviation of Germany's financial distress.

A communique issued when the morning session adjourned said the conferees had considered "methods of international cooperation whereby confidence in Germany's economic stability may be restored in the immediate future."

It was said in well-informed quarters that the conference has been encountering severe and disturbing difficulties, attributed by some to th, insistence of France that Germany pay for outside aid with political concessions.

MUST HELP AT ONCE

At the same time it was said that the United States and Great Britain are agreed that Germany must have help and are prepared to see that she gets it whether France participates or not.

It is understood that the American and British views are in complete accord, that they regard immediate relief as imperative, but they do not approve of a long term loan at this time.

Rather, it was said, they favor short term credits which would bridge over the immediate desperate need and give Germany and her creditors time to discuss what further measures of relief could be extended in the fall.

In a long talk just before the session adjourned, Mr. Stimson told the meeting that the larger American banks on which the government has been able to keep tab, have not withdrawn credits from Germany in this time of her distress.

SPEED IS ESSENTIAL.

On the contrary, he said, there have been some increases of American capital in Germany. He assured the conferees that the American banks will co-operate in relief, provided that aid comes from other countries also.

Following adjournment of the morning session Secretary Stimson publicly expressed himself as satisfied with the start which has been made.

"The lines of the conference are shaping themselves," he said. "The issues are being clarified and there are better prospects than ever for a successful solution."

It was learned that the conversations thus far have been along general lines only.

As one diplomat described the aims of the conferees—"What we want to do now is to give the little Dutch boy a chance to get his thumb out of the hole in the dike so he can get to work."

It is understood that France is rather inclined to protracted discussions, but that the United States and Great Britain maintain that speed is essential.

In support of this contention, it was said that Chancellor Bruening does not know from one moment to the next how long his government will last, and there are many who assert that Germany has been menaced with revolution for some time.

It is understood that Chancellor Bruening ought to return to Berlin on Wednesday night, and that the Americans and British at least feel it necessary that he take back with him definite promises of help.

Those who uphold this course assert that if the chancellor should go back empty-handed, it might mean the end of his government at the hands of a people laboring under a nervous tension which has long been near the breaking point.

The official communique issued after the adjournment said:

"The international conference considered the methods of international cooperation whereby confidence in Germany's economic stability may be restored in the immediate future as a preliminary to examination of further measures which may be necessary to effect a permanent restoration of Germany's financial situation on a firm basis.

"It was arranged that the finance ministers of the countries represented at the conference, with Dr. Bruening and Prime Minister MacDonald, should meet this afternoon to continue examination of the questions raised."

Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson probably will go to Berlin with Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius when the conference here ends, it was understood today.

Hoover Plan Approved by Wall St. Bankers

New York, July 21 (AP)—The proposals made by President Hoover to the London conference today are fundamentally in accord with informal views which leading Wall Street bankers have been expressing for several days.

The maintenance of present credits to Germany, rather than the hasty extension of additional large credits, has been regarded as important financial quarters here as the logical course to pursue at this time.

Several important bankers here express the view that by drastic measures such as the Reichsbank has been taking, Germany can pull through the present crisis with the volume of credit which she already has. After confidence has been restored, both internally and externally, it is felt that measures may be taken to put some of the large amount of short term credit on a long term basis.

Hitler Warns Against French Political Deals

Berlin, July 21 (AP)—In a telegram to Chancellor Bruening in London today, Adolf Hitler, Alfred Hugenberg and other leaders of the Nationalist opposition, served warning that they will not consider themselves bound by any new policies guarantees conceded to Framin connection with financial assistance for Germany.

"To pass proposed by President Hoover and originally intended as a measure of relief for Germ," the Telegram said, "findswit opposed by the undisguised intention of France to force a German people permanent under her dictation. Thus out relief is to be made worse than.

"Reliable quarters in France cannot unaware that the despair and our people, particularly am our young people, has grown such as extent that all kinds test dangerous tactics of thoughts been set in motion.

"The Gen nation, which feels itself free of war guilt, cannot and will not longer carry the unjust burdens forced upon it, and any further reductions of the German state sovereignty is decidedly unbearable and inexcusable."

Veteran Flier Killed

Baton Rouge, La., July 21 (AP)—Kirtley Jones, 38, veteran pilot for the Wedell Williams Air Service, Ind., was killed as he attempted to make a forced landing near Segan station, 10 miles south of Baton Rouge.

CONRY REPLIES TO AMERICAN EDITORIAL

The Evening American today received a letter from Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry in reply to an editorial in this newspaper yesterday.

The letter follows:

Commissioner Conry's statement said:

"To the Editor of the American:

"Dear Sir:—

"An editorial in the American last night bears the caption: 'What's Behind the Move "To get" Mr. Hultman?'

"It opens with a sinister suggestion of a freak alliance, 'out to get Police Commissioner Hultman.' No knowledge of such a purpose exists in this vicinity.

"It has been my honor to have reasonably intimate association with Honorable William Randolph Hearst and because of some of my foreign connections, I appreciate the inestimable value of the services which he has rendered to the American public.

"It has been my fortune in other years to have contributed articles to the Boston American many of which, I am happy to say, met the attention of Mr. Hearst.

"On the occasion of his visit to Boston last year as a guest of our city, it was my pleasure to be his personal escort. Therefore, whatever appears in his paper warrants my immediate and earnest attention.

"Reference is made in the American to a one-man debate. The record shows Mr. Hultman always the offender and the leader in public attack.

"Prudence, rather than desire, probably determined the length of his attack, yet it is a fact that he was always first in the distasteful work. It is equally true he has been first in getting his friends to arrange a surrender.

"Omitting vague generalities and citing specific cases, does the American approve of the recently exposed custom of permitting cars to be tagged 25 times without further action? Does the American approve of the police commissioner's direct and open opposition to the wishes of the business men of the city in placing obstructions before store windows, refusing the advice and complaints of business organizations thusly affected?

"Does the American approve of the monumental obstructions recently placed on Franklin st. by the police commissioner in opposition to the protests of Mayor Curley?

"Does the American approve of the flippant bonst of the police commissioner, who, when he learned of Mayor Curley's opposition, ejaculated: 'I know the law.' He didn't know the law when the Supreme Court threw him out on the matter of reappointment of men in his own department. His whole conduct of his department indicates an infinitesimal knowledge of law.

"I cannot take advantage of the privilege to answer an editorial by giving you two columns of detail. You are invited to take editorial notice of the fact that the police commissioner publicly confessed in the mayor's office his inability to enforce the law.

"Are you not willing to accept his confession as an admission of his incapacity to handle the department?

"I concur with every syllable in your suggestion that reforms and improvements are best brought about by earnest effort and cooperation by proper executives.

"This is just exactly what the police commissioner will not do. He is incapable of co-operation. We have implored him to co-operate with the traffic commission and he flaunts every effort at conciliatory conduct.

"His first outburst was an utterly uncalled-for and imprudent attack upon the traffic commission. He now asks for a 'moratorium.'

"Having been properly chastened by unexpected disclosures he now tempers his 'gale of laughter,' his 'loud guffaw,' and 'hearty laugh' unto a subdued appeal for a soft requiem. R. I. P.

"Yours very truly,

No Personalities in American Editorial

(EDITOR'S NOTE—As stated in the editorial under discussion by Mr. Conry, the Evening American is not interested in any personal dispute between the traffic and police commissioners. This newspaper insists upon an honest and efficient police department. It believes that personal bickerings through the newspapers are destroying the morale of the police department. It suggests that traffic and police problems are best solved through sane consideration by department executives. It does not believe that personal abuse ever solved any problem. If there are faults in the department they certainly should be corrected. It is doubtful if Commissioner Hultman believes he has been able to bring about a perfect department from the chaos of a year ago. And we believe he would welcome help and an occasional encouraging word from Mr. Conry in his efforts to achieve a better department.

Finally, we do not believe that Mr. Conry can bring himself to believe the police department is being helped by exchange of personal abuse in the newspapers.

(Mr. Conry has contributed greatly, over a period of years, to the welfare of Boston. That we cannot see eye to eye with him in this instance, in the continuance of his publicised controversy with Mr. Hultman, is a matter of personal regret. The battle of words is his by a ratio of at least 100 to 1. Isn't it time that real business be done, and in the conference room? Editor, the Boston Evening American.)

FALL PLACED IN JAIL HOSPITAL

Santa Fe, N. M., July 21 (INS)—Albert B. Fall today became No. 6991 in the New Mexico State Penitentiary—stripped of his citizenship rights in the state which has heaped honors on him.

The 70-year-old former Secretary of the Interior was committed last night to serve a sentence of a year and a day on conviction of accepting $100,000 to negotiate a lease on federal oil navel reserves while he was a cabinet officer. The commitment marked the end of an eight-year legal battle.

Bolstered by two heart stimulants administered by his physician while en route by automobile from his ranch at Three Rivers, Dr. J. M. Cambrell, his personal physician, said Fall was in "no condition to be confined."

President Hoover and Department of Justice officials have been urged by Fall's friends to grant him a pardon. Officers said a pardon is not granted until after commitment of the prisoner.

Somerville's Mayor Accepts New Tower

A new traffic tower at Somerville ave. and Northern artery, Somerville, presented by Boston to that city, was accepted by Mayor John J. Murphy today. Mayor Curley was represented by Traffic Commissioner Conry, who was escorted from Boston by Somerville Motorcycle Officers Alfred Casey and James Fitzpatrick.

Commissioner Conry congratulated Mayor Murphy for permitting traffic officers to work coatless in hot weather.

"Others I know who are in charge of police," he said, "force them to wear khaki coats no matter what the temperature."

CURTAINWOOD BOY PUZZLES COLT

Gerald's Son Refuses to Answer Questions About Ownership of Coat He Took to Be Cleansed

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

SLOWLY THATCHER COLT folded the blood-stained coat and replaced it in the lower half of the box. With almost housewifely care, smoothed the lining of tissue paper across the folds of the garment. Still silent, he fitted the top of the box back into position.

In his whole attitude there was no outward evidence of that seething excitement that must have been his, as it was mine, in the face of this damning discovery. Indeed, his somber brown eyes seemed filled with a new melancholy as he finally glanced over at me and asked:

"Tony, will you ask Inspector Lengle to step in here? He is in the front parlor of the rectory."

Colt was still standing by the pulpit, the box on the rail at his side. Apparently he had waited in silence until I returned with the Deputy Chief Inspector.

"Lengel, I want you to hear this," said the chief, and turning instantly to the aviator, he directed:

"Now, Hollander, tell us your story."

The pilot's account was brief and to the point.

"We were in the air three minutes after I had your orders, Mr. Commissioner. There was a head wind against us but we made it in no time at all. We landed at Armonk Field. In the meantime, Billingsley, our grand Sergeant, telephoned the Chief of Police at New Rochelle, and he was at the landing field in a private car.

"The minute I was down the plane took off again, on its way back to the home field, and I was in the car, headed for Pinsky's dyeing and cleaning shop. The chief of police took me in there and we found one scared little dyer, let me tell you. We told him just what to do—that joy was coming with a box and that he was to listen to what the boy told him and then he was to let us do the rest.

A BOY WITH NERVE

"The boy told Pinsky that it was a coat his aunt had borrowed from a relative in New Rochelle and accidentally got it dirty, and it was to be cleaned to look as good as new, so that the relative they borrowed it from would never know what had happened. So would Pinsky please not say anything about it to anybody.

"Pinsky said all right, he would keep quiet about it. Then I came out and grabbed the box and the boy and the box in a private car and started for New York. I tried to talk to him all the way in, but he would not open his trap. I'll say this for him, he's got his nerve."

Dicky Hollander's recital the lad had stood there, cap in hand, listening and observant. His face was pale and his eyes were gleaming brightly, but at this tribute from Capt. Hollander the boy lost that self-command, his lips quivered, and he struggled manfully to fight back tears.

Colt looked at the boy with interest.

"How old are you, son?" he catechized.

"Fifteen."

"What's your full name?"

"Gerald Curtainwood, Jr."—proudly.

"Do you know what was in that package?"

"No, sir."

"Well, but what about that story you told Pinsky?"

"I don't know about that."

"Who sent you out there with it?"

The boy hesitated, looked down at his shoes, and then definitely up at Colt.

"Aren't you going to answer?"

NOT A WORD

"Don't you think your father would want you to tell the truth?"

"Of course he would!"

"Then why do you have to have him here to tell the truth?"

Gerald, Jr., flushed hotly.

"Because," he stuttered, "my father is just as smart as you are, and I'm not."

Colt chuckled.

"You won't even admit whose coat it is?"

"I won't tell you anything," answered Gerald, Jr., "unless you bring my father here. Whatever he says is right with me."

"All right, Gerald, I'll tell you what to do," bargained Thatcher Colt. "You go into the rectory. You'll find Col. Powell in there. You tell Col. Powell about this. Tell him how a policeman was waiting at Pinsky's dyeing-place when you got there. Tell him how I opened the coat and looked at it here. Tell him "—to get the coat now. Tell him everything, Gerald, and hurry along."

"You bet I will," he said, and ran from the church, slamming the door after him.

"Now," predicted Colt, "we'll begin to hear some fireworks, Lengel, I want you to get busy on this coat s quickly as possible. The label shows it was bought at Lord & Taylor's. Get down there and establish the fact that it is the property of Mrs. Beazeley.

"I see that it has been twice repaired by an expert tailor, probably at the store where it was purchased. Get that settled first of all. Then have the department chemists analyze those stains and definitely establish that they are human blood stains. Hurry along, because Powell will be here at any minute."

THE WRONG JUDGE

"There is a department car outside. I'm off," and Lengel hurried down the aisle of the church. At the door he almost collided with Dist.-Atty. Dougherty, who trudged in, round-shouldered, waistless, dripping and tired. With his bulging eyes rolling in palpable weariness he tottered up to the front pew, sat down panting, and looked up unhappily at Colt.

"Well," drawled Colt, "did you get your court order?"

Dougherty groaned.

"If I wasn't in a church," he said, "I would tell you just how I feel."

"You didn't get it?"

"No—I didn't it. I will get it, but I didn't get it. The judge took it under advisement."

"But he has to give it to you," argued Colt.

"I know that," moaned Dougherty, "and the judge knows it, but he doesn't have to give it to me till tomorrow morning, and his law partner is one of the board of directors of Gerald Curtainwood's bank."

"And that's the judge you picked for your appointing?"

Dougherty threw up his hands.

"Now don't say any more! I didn't know all that till afterward. You know, Colt, it must be a wonderful thing to be police commissioner. You are the boss of the whole works. You say to this man do this, and he does it. He has to do it or lose his job, but I've got to argue and plead before judge and jury for pretty nearly everything I want."

He wiped his red face.

"However," he mentioned, "those newspaper boys were wonderful to me."

"Oh, so that's what kept you."

"Do you think," raged Dougherty, "that I am going to let Alexander hog all the space on the front page of the extras with stories of how I put a grieving widow through the third degree, making me out an inhuman monster with which to frighten little children in their beds at night? That boy works fast. But life isn't lived in a day," added the district attorney philosophically, "and Col. Powell will learn to his cost that I am in this investigation to stay, in spite of his malingering clients."

A DIVISION OF NATIONAL DAIRY

RURAL DRAMA'S BIRTHPLACE NOW MODERNIZED

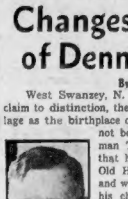
By NICHOLAS YOUNG

West Swanzey, N. H., July 21—Whatever else may be its claim to distinction, the fame of this quiet Cheshire County village as the birthplace of the great American rural drama cannot be dislodged. For it was here that Denman Thompson lived as a boy; it was here that he first drew the rough plans for "The Old Homestead," and it was from real men and women of this community that he modeled his characters. To complete his work, the principal scenes of the play were laid in and about the old Holbrook farm, which today takes in summer boarders, sells souvenirs, and by the end of the season rounds up a nice profit thereby. Denman Thompson made the village of West Swanzey known to every state in the Union and not, in this generation, at least, will memory of it be effaced.



Nicholas Young

If you should politely approach Irving Cross, Boston & Maine depot master and village philosopher, and make proper inquiry, he would tell you that the principal point of interest in the old town is Denman Thompson's grave and the big house across the road where the actor lived until the final curtain. The house is now a comfortable refuge for aged Pythians.

* * *

On the other hand, Oscar Bourne's camp was attractive enough in its way, but it was purely recreational and could not for a moment be compared with Denman Thompson's cemetery lot. Irving was not to be lured out of his original position; Oscar Bourne's camp was merely a refuge for city dudes; Denman Thompson's grave was a shrine at which all lovers of the good old American drama should bend a knee.

There is a general belief that Denman Thompson was born in West Swanzey; not so. This pioneer of homespun comedy-with-a-moral was born in Girard, Pa., but moved to West Swanzey with his parents when a boy of six.

Tradition tells us that Denman Thompson was an ordinary farmer boy until he found himself possessed of a talent for clog dancing. That was in 1850, and the boy just 17. Interest in the old farm dropped considerably and before the year was out he carried a spear in Charlotte Cushman's Lady Macbeth at the old Howard Athenaeum in Boston. The rural drama, as Denman Thompson created it, was still unborn, to give the quaint home folk in West Swanzey occasionally filtered through young Thompson's mind. Whereupon came the sketch called "Joshua Whitcomb," which, later, was rewritten into a four-act play. This was "The Old Homestead." Its first public performance was at the Boston Theater, in April of the same year. The first week's receipts were $11,279.25, at top price of $1.50.

But Denman Thompson had done bigger things with "The Old Homestead." He kept it alive for 30 years; he amassed a fortune with it and he never forgot the old home town. Through him was primarily created the taste for comedy of fields and pastures—of homespun folk. Running hand in hand with it were such plays as "Bly Farm," "Shore Acres," "Blue Jeans" and "Sag Harbor," and we may easily believe that "The Old Homestead" was the inspiration.

In the meantime, West Swanzey has grown more or less. Denman Thompson and he became a solid part of the village. He was, in turn, good citizen and good neighbor.

Only the lake remains as it was when "The Old Homestead" was good for 40 weeks every season.

The Thompsons have all disappeared; the shores of the lake ring with new voices. Thompson's own magnificent summer home has been alternately a boy's camp and refuge for tired business men.

There is no more rural drama. In its place are sex plays, gangster plays, mystery plays and what-not. And legitimate theater business hasn't been any too good for some time.

Renault Heads Scollay Bill

Francis Renault, known as "The Slave of Fashion," Bee and Ray Gorman, with their big "Modernistic Revue;" Earl Lavere, the "funny-man," go over big in the stage show at the Scollay this week.

Renault comes with his elaborate and costly wardrobe and his pleasing voice; the comedy he has to offer is very smart.

The Gormans have a large company of dancers with them who excel. Lavere has a clever comedy skit and stops the show cold.

The program also has Duke Nelson and Wynn. The Three Upstarts go strong. Gene Barnes, in a special act written by Eddie Cantor, follows.

GIRLS! HE'S IN LOVE

George Bancroft, in Boston, Bares Secrets of His Heart

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The secret is out—there's a woman in George Bancroft's life! Love makes the world go 'round, and the movie he-man, above all movie he-men, is in love. It took us hours of association with him to get the low-down on his career. Suddenly, in the evening after a busy and yet a jubilant day with this boyishly exuberant actor, the key came—Bancroft's open sesame of soul—and it threw so much light on his personality and success that one felt like crying out, Eureka!

* * *

The name of the woman in the Bancroft case is Octavia Brooke. Our guess is that she has great beauty. But her soul is no guessing matter; the poet's perfect woman nobly planned—Octavia Brooke must be just that. At intervals we had talked of about everything under the cinematic sun, saving until last the point we thought Bancroft might be touchy about, if only for business reasons. The matter of his recent "battle" with Paramount over salary. You fans know all about it. It is supposed to have lasted for many weeks, with the star laying down a barrage for so much salary, and no less; and the producers trying to bring him to terms in his dugout by the slow torture of poison gas. It just didn't happen that way. Why? Let the great George himself tell it:

"There wasn't any fight at all. It was just publicity; nothing more. I have a good manager who never goes wrong. That manager handled the whole business quietly and effectively."

Who, pray, is this marvel among managers?

None other than the aforesaid Octavia Brooke.

Then listen to this confession from the hero of a million women fans' hopes and hearts:

"She's my love. She has my affections tied up in a knot—she holds the knot. I have made unconditional surrender to her; personally, I don't like business, and she handles all such matters for me. And I owe my success to her. So, doesn't she deserve my whole love?"

Here's the clincher, fans:

"She's my wife!"

Well, we asked a lot about her. Opera and theater-goers generally will remember her golden voice on the stage when she was a star in her own right. A Boston critic wrote of her that she had the grandest voice ever heard in or out of opera. She and Bancroft happened to be in the same company, and Cupid did the rest. And in all the years the great he-man actor has been in films, she has been his mainspring, his inspiration, the keeper of the exchequer, the caretaker of the home—in short, she submerged her own future to serve her mate. And if that isn't as fine an epic of the American home as could be wished, and of old-fashioned woman's love, then we'll eat our hats.

Yes, the Bancrofts have a child, one, a daughter. She is 14. Before the story came, Pa and Ma had picked George, Jr., and Georgette, to meet all contingencies. It happened to be Georgette!

Constance Bennett to Be Starred by Rogers in "Riverside Drive"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, July 21—There is more rejoicing in Hollywood over finding one good author than in locating a dozen new players. Stories, my friends, are scarce enough to cause our boy friends, the producers, many hours of anxiety. Charlie Rogers is broadcasting with delight the news that he has purchased "Riverside Drive" from Beth Brown, author of "Applause."

You can understand why Charlie is in such ecstasy when I tell you "Riverside Drive" will be published serially in Cosmopolitan. How many million readers? You will have to ask Ray Long.

The story, says Charlie, was made for Constance Bennett. When the alluring daughter of the Bennetts returns in September with a new Paris wardrobe, she will first step into "Dangerous to Love" and "Riverside Drive" will follow. That, according to my mathematics makes two pictures. She is scheduled for four. Maybe she will sneak in another $30,000 contract.

Seen and heard in Hollywood: The pretty daughter of Harry Weber, Muriel Weber, will become the bride of Raymond Milland the last week in September. Both young people are under contract and he is one of the promising players. Santa Barbara is becoming the favorite weekend place for some of our film people. Exclusive, you know, and quiet! Edgar Selwyn and Ruthie took themselves up there for the weekend, also Helen Hayes. The best swimming in California, we are told. Having learned to swim now we'll have to go up there and try it out.

NAUTILUS MAY SAIL TOMORROW FOR ARCTIC

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Aboard Submarine Nautilus, Devonport, Eng., July 2—With repairs in the engine room progressing, the Nautilus should be ready to leave for Bergen, Norway, on the next preliminary stage of its trip to the North Pole by Wednesday or possibly Thursday.

The crew has been working day and night in the engine room to complete the refitting necessary after our troublesome transatlantic crossing.

If all goes as expected, the engines should be ready to operate under their own power tomorrow morning. If they do so satisfactorily, only a few hours added work will be necessary to make the Nautilus ready for sea.

Our departure, however, must be regulated by the tide which governs the movements of craft from the submarine basin where the Nautilus is now in drydock.

JAIL AVOIDED BY CORBETT

New York, July 21 (INS)—J. Morgan Corbett, wealthy Boston real estate man, finally raised a $500 bond through a friend today and escaped going to jail for not paying his hotel bills.

Corbett recently was convicted of having tortured James Quinn, his aviation pilot, in an effort to force the latter to reveal the whereabouts of Mrs. Corbett, who left him. Sentence was suspended.

The total was $220.50, which Corbett admitted he could not raise at the moment. They confiscated his clothing from his room, leaving Corbett only a pair of pajamas, and gave him until noon today before having him arrested.

Dr. E. H. Cohoon, Ill 4 Months, Dies

Dr. Elisha H. Cohoon, superintendent of the Medfield State Hospital and former administrator of the Psychopathic Hospital, died today at Medfield after an illness of four months.

He was a distinguished figure in the medical world. Born in Nova Scotia, Sept. 29, 1874, and graduating from Acadia University there in 1894, he obtained his M. D. degree at the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, in 1903.

He served on the staff of the Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, state hospital; the Pueblo, Col., state hospital, and the Howard, R. I., state hospital, before going to the Boston Psychopathic Hospital in 1915.

R. I. Strikers Won't Work in Connecticut

Putnam, Ct., July 21 (AP)—Strikers at the silk plant of M. Salzberg Sons & Co. today strengthened their picket lines as a half dozen of their number returned to work in the warping and twisting department.

The arrival at the factory of 15 weavers from the strike area at Central Falls, R. I., also caused the strikers to increase their vigil. The imported workers refused to enter the employ of the company when they learned a strike was under way. Police augmented their forces as a safeguard against disorder.

Slayer to Marry as Oklahoma Governor Grants Him Pardon

Oklahoma City, July 21—(AP)—Gov. W. H. Murray, touched by the devotion of a school teacher for a convicted bank robber and gunman, has paroled Jess Littrell, serving a life sentence for murder in State's prison.

Today Littrell and the girl, whose name the governor asked be withheld, visited the executive chambers. They plan to marry. The man, now 47 years old, was convicted here in 1917 for robbery in connection with the holding of a bank and was given a 25-year term.

Then he was identified as the slayer of Deputy Sheriff L. M. Boulware in a gun fight near Okemah and was given a life term.

WIVES HOOT AT OIL HEARING

The resumption of the stormy hearing over the Revere oil farm controversy at the State House today was marked by jeers and catcalls and the shouts of militant Revere housewives, gathered to protest the erection of 3,000,000 gallon storage tanks near their property.

For the second consecutive day State Fire Marshal John W. Reath, presiding, was forced to call State House guards to maintain a semblance of order.

One woman, particularly vociferous, led her co-partisans in an outburst of shouting during the testimony of Alfred S. Hall, former mayor of Revere, testifying for the petitioners.

As if at a signal, a score of women sprang to their feet and added their voices to her outcries.

Marshal Reth banged continually with his gavel, but the uproar did not subside until a husky guard was posted at the marshal's side.

"I have directed this guard," the marshal said, "to eject anyone who interrupts the hearing again. Before the end of the hearing anyone who has anything to say will be given an opportunity to say it. Until a time is set for individual discussion, this meeting will be conducted in an orderly manner, and any disturbers will be thrown out."

Yesterday guards were called to quell women who surrounded Fire Chief Kimball of Revere and threatened him with bodily harm because he testified that, in his opinion, the oil tanks would not constitute a fire menace.

MURDER CHARGE IN LOVE FIGHT

Cranston, R. I., July 21—A manslaughter charge was placed today against Edward J. Whalen, chemical company superintendent, in connection with the death of Andrew Larsen, a barge captain, which followed a fist fight over a girl and Larsen's alleged leaping from a moving automobile.

Whalen was arraigned before Judge Dunn and held in heavy bail.

John J. Crofton of Cranston and Tage P. Frieberg of Providence, who were with Whalen and Larsen in the automobile, were held as witnesses.

According to Whalen, Crofton and Frieberg, Whalen and Larsen "made up," shook hands and agreed to forget their differences.

On the way home, however, words broke out anew, and Larsen leaped from the moving car.

$135 Tax on Autos

London, July 21 (INS)—Motorists in Great Britain pay the highest taxes in the world. The average is more than $135 each vehicle per annum.

CIGARETTE CO. HEAD INDICTED

The grand jury today returned two indictments against Archibald Cigarette Co. of Metchnic Row, Boston, charging the company with the sale of tobacco and cigarettes without revenue stamps attached.

Edward W. Welch, an official of the company, was named in a third indictment on a specific charge of selling unstamped cigarettes to a retail dealer.

The government charges that between January and May of this year the company failed to pay $3282 due for revenue stamps for their cigarettes.

Indictments were returned against Leo J. Shea of Everett and Anthony Ventullo of Boston on narcotic charges. There were four indictments for violation of the liquor law and three secret indictments.

THIEF'S PLEA WINS COURT

A plea that poverty of his family caused him to steal funds from a labor organization of which he was treasurer won a suspended sentence and probation in Municipal Court today for Neil D. Morrison, 36, of Columbia rd., Dorchester.

Morrison was found guilty of larceny of $3695.57 from the Boston local of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers.

Inspector Stephen J. Fisherty told Judge Zottoli the money was taken over a period of four years, and was used by Morrison to support his family, he being out of work. He said Morrison had made restitution of $700 when the shortage was discovered last February. Another payment of $300 was made today, and the defendant agreed to pay back the entire amount.

DIGGING HALTED ON BUNKER HILL

Bunker Hill is safe.

Inspector Giles Powell of the city building department announced today he had ordered suspended the work of removing soil from the North Meade st. side of the famous hill.

He refused to comment on the matter, saying any statement would have to come from Building Commissioner Edward W. Roemer to whom he made a written report.

The action was taken as a result of a complaint by City Councillor Thomas H. Green of Charlestown.

Councillor Green charged that so much soil had been taken from the hill by Coleman Bros., contractors, to use as fill in the Charles river, that six houses had been endangered.

Lee Electric Wants Southwick Plant

Approval of the purchase of the Southwick Municipal Lighting plant by the Lee Electric Co. was asked today at a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

TWO INSURANCE MEN FACE TRIAL

Charles A. Fingerhood, 40, of Keesville, N. Y., former president of the Massachusetts-barred Atlantic Mutual Casualty Insurance Co., was held in $5000 for trial in superior court today when arraigned on a charge of fraudulently appropriating $7000 of company funds. He pleaded not guilty.

September was set as the trial month.

Harry Mackler, another former officer of the company, was arraigned last week on a similar charge and also was released in $5000 for a September trial.

The Atlantic Mutual Casualty Insurance Co. was barred two months ago from doing business in Boston and as a result thousands of automobile owners were forced to secure new liability insurance.

Capone, Facing Jail, Is Feared Broke

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—The Chicago Herald and Examiner said today that Alphonse Capone, who soon will go to prison, is either "broke" or has successfully concealed his assets.

Capone's Gunner, McGurn, Is Jailed

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—Jack McGurn, the dapper young machine gunner of the Capone clan, was sentenced to two years in Leavenworth prison today on a Mann act charge.

His wife, the former Louise Rolfe, who was his "alibi" when he was sought for the St. Valentine's Day massacre in 1929, was sentenced to the Cook County jail for four months.

Barn Razed to Save Starving Puppies

Ogdensburg, N. J., July 21 (AP)—Frank Pitzherbert and his neighbors began today to tear down a stable to save a litter of puppies.

The puppies are lodged in an inaccessible hole and faced death by starvation until Pitzherbert decided to tear down the barn. Efforts to feed the puppies from a cup at the end of a pole were futile.

Woman Renounces $25,000 Movie Award

London, July 21 (AP)—Miss Millie Orpen, who was awarded $25,000 last week in a suit against a movie theater which remained open on Sunday in violation of a blue law more than a century old, today renounced the award. She said she never had intended to collect it but sued only as a test case.

Tells on Speakeasy, Jailed for Possessing

West Orange, N. J., July 21 (AP)—Dought Maggood went to the police today with a story about being insulted in a speakeasy.

"How do I know you were in a speakeasy?" inquired Police Chief McConnell.

"Here's the whiskey I bought there," said Maggood, producing a flask. The chief arrested him for illegal possession of liquor.

CUPID'S CON HILL

—by—

Betty Alden

SUNSHINE HAS ALWAYS BEEN TO ME ONE OF THE essentials of living—one of the few, to be quite frank—but sitting on the benches watching the tennis matches at Essex County Club yesterday made me realize that everything in moderation is an excellent rule. One can even get too much of the limelight, it seems, as the gallery which attended the premiere of Miss Helen Wills—simply can't call her Mrs. Moody as the name does not describe her—was hardly one to get enthusiastic over. Tennis enthusiasts were all there, the Winthrops and the Palfreys, the Bundys and the Phelans, the Morrills and the Stevens and others who have juniors on the courts, but it was a small crowd for so great an attraction as the great Helen.

VIRGINIA RICE

Of course, the first day is usually a bit scanty—depending more or less on the weather and what the shoreites did over the week-end. On account of the dearth of yachts in home waters, inland sports were more popular and that is why we expected a record crowd at Essex. The day was perfect, cool, clear and breezy, good for tennis.

* * *

The very first couple we spied were Betty Pope and her fiance, Paul Shaw, Betty very chic in black and white checked silk greeting Serita Bartlett in red and white sport costume. Betty will be wed in September, and we hear Paul is not going to finish out his college years, but will seek a future in the world of finance.

Marjorie Morrill in the Limelight

ALWAYS FRIENDLY, WE CHATTED WITH MARJORIE MORRILL, on whom many of the heavy honors fell for the success of the tournament. She was very debonair in white tennis rig with green band encircling her blonde waves and has the most contagious walk, like wings. A real beauty, Katherine Winthrop's brunette coloring was accentuated by an ochre frock and turban and her slim stockinglegs limbs were a marvel of tan.

* * *

WE HARDLY RECOGNIZED Marian Duane, who was accompanied by her brother, Robert. She played in the matches and looked so very childish we hardly placed her as the slim sophisticated maiden whom we snapped at the Vincent Club show in black evening gown and orchids. Mrs. John Parfrey was wandering among keeping tabs on her talented tennis trio and Les, in mauve turban, greeted her many friends of the courts.

THE LAST WE REMEMBER seeing Virginia Rice —one of the stars—was in a popular millinery shop purchasing a huge sunhat, which she did not wear this day as she was in tennis costume, very becoming. Madelaine Phillips, daughter of the John Phillips and one of the debs of this season, strolled about with Anne Dick and we hear that the reason there were not more debs on the scene was because of a tea which was being given at Helen Warren's for the committee sponsoring the subscription dance to be held in September by this popular group.

ONE OF THE MOST BEAUTIFUL summer costumes was worn by Mrs. Randolph Tucker of Wenham, daughter of Col. Edward House, which was a soft rust shade with bordered bolero, topped by large shaded hat. Another costume which we remember was that worn by Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Jr., firecracker red crepe coat over a white crepe dress with jaunty bow tie. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Lucas, who is visiting her. Perfectly stunning was Mrs. William Faversham of Concord, in Patou pink, with her guest, Miss Florence Le Boutillier of Westbury, L. I., who played in the matches in the morning.

* * *

Mrs. Edward Sturgis was lovely in an eggshell crepe with futuristic border and garden hat escorted by her brother-in-law, Howard Sturgis, and would you believe it we asked her name. It may be our imagination, but we always recognized her by her merry smile and the several times we have seen her she hasn't displayed it—what can the matterbe. Please keep on smiling, Mistress Mary.

AMONG THE YOUNG FOLKS was Louis Stevens, débutante daughter of Mrs. John N. Stevens, whose daughter, Leila, was married last week, and with her friend, Miss Elizabeth Jacques, young daughter of the Herbert Jacques.

MISS SALLY SPRAGUE WEDS OGDEN WHITE AUGUST 8 IN MAINE

Junior Leaguer Selects Her Attendants

It is rather a coincidence that with the whole month of July to get married in, the only two brides of that month chose the same date, the 16th, and now as August gets nearer we see that the two most important weddings are both to be on the 8th. It was tad enough for us to get around to them all in June, but to have such clashes during the summer with more than plenty of dates to go around, and some left over, that we should have to break our necks and clean police records dashing up and down the Maine coast.

Maine Wedding

Miss Sally Sprague has chosen that day, Saturday, August 8, on which to become the wife of Ogden White, in St. James Church, at Prout's Neck, Maine. The very simple ceremony will be solemnized at 1:30 by the Rev. John Upham Harris, rector of the church.

The wedding party is to be small, the bride being attended only by her sister, Mrs. Daniel Simonds, 2d, (Elizabeth Sprague), of 203 Commonwealth ave. and Manchester, and Mr. White will have his brother, Alexander M. White Jr., as his best man. There will be no other bridesmaids or even ushers, and as it is to be so informal, the guests will seat themselves.

But two little boys, both aged six, and nephews of the bride and bridegroom, will be in the procession, dressed in white flannel suits. They are Phineas Sprague, 3d, small son of Mr. and Mrs. Phineas Shaw Sprague (Lucy Carnegie), the former a brother of Miss Sally's; and Theodore Janeway, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Janeway (Elinor White) of New York and Oyster Bay, L. I.

Junior Leaguer

Miss Sprague is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phineas Warren Sprague of 199 Commonwealth ave., Boston, and Prout's Neck. She made her debut in the season 1928-29, and is a member of the Junior League and the Vincent Club. Her husband-to-be, who is the son of Mrs. Alexander M. White, and the late Mr. White, of Oyster Bay, was a graduate of this year's senior class at Harvard.

The other wedding on this same date is that of Miss Elizabeth Atwater Kent and Mr. William L. Van Alen, at Bar Harbor, Maine. Miss Kent is the daughter of the Atwater Kents of Philadelphia, who announced her engagement this spring. The Misses Bertha Palmer and Edith McCormick, of Chicago, will be in the bridal party.

Resorters Live in Pajamas

By ANN ARDEN

SUMMERTIME is play time, and perky pajamas are the consistent uniform to be brisk and boyish in. Following the mode of the beach pajama, we find it a swaggering beach lion, and confess an overincreasing awe for its versatility, its breezy nonchalance.

* * *

ALSO IT is refreshing as a salt breeze not to have to use the overworked phrase "femininity" once in referring to it. Obviously for the sunny side of life is the pajama costume pictured, of white linen, a one piece garment, horizontally striped green and yellow. The trousers are of medium width, and the neckline is square, almost waist deep in back to permit plenty of sun tan.

* * *

THE ACCOMPANING bolero jacket has short sleeves and is lined in terry cloth, a moisture absorbing material. The hat, of washable white pique, is all-over eyelet embroidered, affording airy shade from a too violent sun. The beach sandals are of green and white rubber, the play-ball boasting gaily colored parrots for decoration.

* * *

THE ONE necessity of the resort made is a casual air. Even hats are refusing to take on the rigidity that comes from blocking and all unblocked are allowed to droop or curl at will. This carelessness upon the part of the hat harmonizes with loose pajama costumes and casual overalls of linen or printed cotton. The unblocked hat lends itself to becoming folds and ripples.

* * *

THE SANDALS carry out the general brightness of the beach color scheme and should really be chosen with the greatest of care so that they match or contrast where either of these notes are necessary.

Vivid Colorings Favored at Deauville

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL

Deauville, July 21 (US)—With the season yet in embryo the center of the universe here is, of course, the Bar Du Soliel on the boardwalk or the so-called "Millionaires' Mile." It is here also that one can see what is in vogue as far as bathing costumes and beach suits are concerned.

The morning parades still are quite in keeping with normal times, and vivid colorings appear to be more favored than pastel shades—intense reds, greens and blues prevailing in walking costumes and beach suits or pajamas.

Dog Matches Gown

Two extremely chic French sisters, tall and slender and about 18 and 20, created quite a sensation when each led a dog matching her costume.

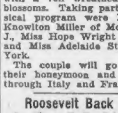
Comtesse Guy de Bourg de Bozas former Miss Fuller Feder of Philadelphia, wore a skirt of fine woolen material in small checks in green and white, with a short jacket of plain green kasha belted at the natural waistline in a matching colored leather belt. Her small tight fitting hat was of the same material as the skirt.

Mrs. Guy Thomas, of Minneapolis was seen with a party of friends She wore a dress of turquoise blue crepe marocain with a wide brimmed hat of stitched silk of the same shade and she wore over her dress a long beige coat.

Crepe Marocain

Mrs. Thomas Gilbert of New York was smartly attired in brown and yellow. Her ensemble consisted of short, plain woolen jacket a brown and yellow woolen jersey blouse and a skirt with inserted box pleats, starting at the knees with a tiny flower pattern in canary yellow.

At the Ambassadeurs recently were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hatry of Los Angeles. Mrs. Hatry donned a Chanel dress of very fine black lace, the skirt moulded closely to the hips and flaring from the knees. Her scarf, also black lace and wide, was thrown over the shoulder.



YOU NEVER KNEW BRAN COULD BE SO DELICIOUS

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is a delightful surprise. It is as good to eat as it is good for you.

This appetizing ready-to-eat cereal protects and relieves you from constipation—and from the headaches, the dizziness, the lack of "pep" that go with it.

Start the whole family on this health-habit tomorrow. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN, eaten daily, will prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In severe cases, eat ALL-BRAN with each meal.

Delicious with milk or cream, fruits or honey added. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron, which brings color to cheeks and lips. At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Shaw at Tomb of Red Lenin

Moscow, July 21 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw reached here today, waved his hat at the hundreds waiting for him at the railway station, and declined the pleas of Nancy, Lady Astor, also a member of the British touring party, to see the gentlemen of the press.

"Oh, but you must see them, George," said the American-born peeress.

"I'll see them—definitely and categorically damned," Shaw replied, and demanded to be taken immediately to the tomb of Lenin in Red sq.

Harvard Revue With Puppets

"Stringing Broadway," first musical comedy ever to be performed in this country with puppets, had its local premiere last night at Sanders' Theater, Harvard, to the great delight of approximately 1300 members of the Harvard summer school session.

The performance was given by the Tatterman Marionettes. The comedy had in its makeup all the elements found in the popular form of American entertainment even to a gay chorus.

"Stringing Broadway" was written by Edward Mabley, the lyrics are by William Duncan, and the musical score is by George Cottle, young Cleveland pianist.

The sketches included in the diminutive musical comedy a burlesque mystery number, "The Cloak and Suit Case".

CHURCHES, GAMBLING AND HAPPINESS

By Gilbert Seldes

IF YOU DO NOT PLAY CARDS and do not go to church, you are probably unhappy.

I am afraid this is one of those statements which doesn't make much sense and would not be terribly important if it did; I got it out of a newspaper account of a survey of happiness made by Dr. Randolph C. Sailer, of Teachers' College. I do not suppose I have done the investigator justice, but I shall do my best to make up for it.

The survey was "designed to diagnose and compute mathematically the nature and degree of happiness inherent in each person tested." It consisted of a test, a series of questions probably, to which 300 possible responses could be made. The individuals examined were, of course, their own judges in the first instance. They said whether they were happy, happier than their acquaintances, or vice versa. They also told a good deal about themselves, and by comparing records, it was discovered that "individuals who think that life has a serious purpose are usually happy," and so are thick-skinned people who are not sensitive to the woes of others.

The Jolly Rhinoceros

This is profoundly interesting. I understand why the rhinoceros is not affected by the mosquito; I understand also that those who have a strong religious affiliation call themselves happy, since it is one of the ends of religion to soften the miseries of daily life. But those individuals who think that life has a serious purpose, they baffle me. Are they happy because they think that purpose is being fulfilled or do they take a sinister pleasure out of the wreckage of human hopes and ambitions? Is it their own private life which has a serious purpose and are they making a go of it? Or is it life itself, the big capitalized universal life that has a purpose which they have discovered and, perhaps, fulfilled?

• • •

A Little Dancing

The combination of religious feeling with card playing (and dancing, too) will be unsatisfactory to certain sects which will not be pleased to have church-going ranked with poker and the foxtrot as solace for the weary spirit. There are other discoveries in the survey; night school students tend to be unhappy. (The obvious thing to do is to close the night schools.) "Sex worry is closely connected with unhappiness!" That's news. And "among night school men there is some tendency for those with low salaries to be more happy than the higher paid workers." This last I think I'll have to take home and gnaw at for a while.

The surprising thing to me in the whole survey—as soon as I got over surprise at the thought that it had been made at all—was that apparently some people were not ashamed to say they are happy. A few months ago I heard a woman say she was happy and half of the men and women who heard the news thought she was lying, the other half being busy trying to discover what impropriety she had committed. It is not good form to boast of happiness in these times; a little tragedy is what you are expected to offer.

How Are You? Don't Answer

If you take seriously the "How are you?" of a daily greeting, you should always err on the side of misery when making an answer. You may say, "I'm fine," but in that case you mustn't say it with conviction and must hastily ask after the health and well-being of your opponent. If you say you are splendid and gloriously happy, you offend him. It is polite to appear less prosperous, less healthy, and less contented than your neighbor. Since you have no true measure of the happiness of others, the safe thing is to belittle your own.

I offer you the testimony of a man who had everything the average man desires for happiness. He was wealthy; he was successful, honored at home, in a position of power, adored by the whole race of women, admired by the world; Napoleon, we understand, came to see him and declared, "This is a man!" His name was Goethe. Toward the end of his life he said to Eckermann that his existence had been "nothing but pain and burden" and solemnly affirmed that "during the whole of my 75 years I have had four weeks of genuine well-being," the rest of life consisting of "the perpetual rolling of a rock which must be raised up again forever." Note that this man of almost infinite wisdom condemned even his babyhood, even the childhood he had forgotten. Four good weeks, in 75 years, of comfort, pleasure, success! Who would dare to lay claim to happiness after that?

After Thirty

Exotic fiction strangely bores me,
Confessions leave me stark and cold,
Deduction tires me, and floors me—
Oh! can it be I'm growing old?

No longer can I dance till daylight,
Two sodas make me very ill—
A song that sounds through twilight's gray light
Can not remove the evening chill!

I like my slippers to be easy,
Dark gowns now hold a recompense—
Can I be getting old and weary,
Or can it be I'm getting sense?

Other Men's Ideas

From "Nhe Nineteenth Century":

"I must not quote from letters of living writers. But I am sure that Mr. Masefield will forgive me if I make one exception. From the one the Poet Laureate sent to the headmaster of the Clinton preparatory school:

"'There is a school for very little boys here. One of them, age 8½, was heard to say the other day, "One of our men in the lower fourth comes to school in a pram every day."'

"Behold a parable!
Did not a pang of more than pity take
Your heart thereat, not for the youngling's sake,
But for your own, for man that passes by,
So like to God, so like the beasts that die?

"What more appropriate reflection could be ours as we turn from contemplating these tokens of mortality 'dropt from the ruin'd [illegible] kings'? Great and small alike, do we [illegible] the end of our days resemble the [illegible] ant little creatures who call [illegible] and 'come to school in a pram'?"

"Look at that cavity."

Stalin

By Bruno Lessing

PARIS—"HE IS single-tracked."

Raining and nowhere to go, so I took up Isaac Don Levine's new book, "Stalin," and came across that line. It's on the 338th page and the author doesn't even emphasize it. But to me it was the summing-up of a fascinating book and a fascinating character. It epitomizes the character of Russia's dictator. I wonder if there ever was a great man who was not single-tracked.

The story of Stalin is really the story of the Russia of today. More than any story of Lenin or Trotsky could be. Because Stalin went through what they both went through and is still going on, all-powerful and triumphant. Reading this book is like reading the story of Napoleon when Napoleon was alive.

• • •

A Clear Picture

If you are interested in Russia—and, believe me, you ought to be—you will get a clearer picture from this book than from anything I have thus far read on the subject. The professors of history used to say that one could not trace the causes of the French revolution because it was too recent—only a hundred years ago.

They thought those causes would be made clear a couple of hundred years from now. In Levine's book the causes of the Russian revolution are made as clear as the causes of your bank in refusing to renew your note.

As a hard-boiled reader I'm not easily influenced by books, especially biographies. Most biographies reveal the spirit of their author more clearly than that of their subject. In reading this book I was entirely oblivious of the author. I became absorbed in Stalin. And I like him. I don't care whether he's a monster or a tyrant or not. I don't care whether he's cruel and brutal or kind and loving.

Many incidents in the book made me shudder and some made me want to go out and punch somebody to relieve my feelings. But out of all those incidents there emerged a Stalin who, I must confess, makes a big hit with me. One of the kicks I got out of the personal habits of the man who controls the destinies of nearly two hundred million people was this line:

"Stalin's wardrobe does not include any neckties"

• • •

"Shoot Chauffeur"

More than a thousand years ago a Roman writer said "the times change and we change with them." Funny that people so long ago noticed the same things that we notice today. Stalin got word, far away from the scene, that an important official of his organization had been run over by an automobile. He telegraphed back, "Shoot the chauffeur."

There was a time when such a callous attitude toward human life would have staggered everybody. Being rather old-fashioned, I'm even staggered today. In an interchange of letters concerning some stories I was planning, Clarence Winchester, a successful London editor, wrote me:

"War and death have become trite since 1914. And that makes them difficult to write about."

The times certainly have changed. I guess I must have changed with them because when I was a youngster, and admired Marcus Aurelius and Lord Chesterfield's letters to his son, I could not have admired Stalin any more than Al Capone. I would cheerfully have taken both for a ride. Yet both are factors in this life of ours.

Fortune Tellers

By Agnes Smith

ALL MY LIFE I HAVE envied ladies who are psychic. A gift of prophecy and an acute susceptibility to forebodings are no small social assets.

Women who are endowed with meaningful pre-Freudian dreams or those gifted with a knack of "running through the cards," finding intimate messages in tea leaves, or interpreting subtle points of character in the lines of the hand, are usually cherished far beyond the deserts of their personal merits.

These psychic ladies who find it so easy to make connections with the infinite are delightful company. I envy them their faith and imagination. To my limited eyes, a Jack of Hearts is a Jack of Hearts and, unless accompanied by one of his brothers, not even good for an opener.

In the presence of fortune-tellers, I am always hopeful. I hope to be convinced, to be won over, to be overwhelmed; but never yet have I encountered a definite prophecy that was even remotely genuine.

• • •

The Numerologists

Numerologists, by their skillful juggling of figures, have assured me that my success would be unbounded if my name were other than Smith. But they never have been able to prove to me conclusively that my outlook and character would be vastly improved if I adopted the name of Le Clair. I am stubborn about the name of Smith. I was born a Smith and I married one. I feel that it is my destiny and so not to be diverted by arithmetical conjury.

Myself when young did eagerly frequent a great assortment of palmists. The diversity of their verdicts finally discouraged me. I was to have anything from no husband to four. As a mere baby, I had narrowly escaped drowning—a fact unverified by the family records. I had an M on my palm signifying the accumulation of wealth. I had an M on my palm so ill-starred and broken as to nullify its benisons.

• • •

The Ouija Board

At one time I owned a ouija board—as who has not—and it was a great success. As far as I know the thing never moved of its own accord. Weary of sitting for long minutes waiting for spirit confidences, I became an expert at pushing it.

I also have cheated shamelessly and extensively at table tipping. I am unable to sit at a table tipping seance without cheating. The spectacle of so many persons sitting around in the dark hoping for the impossible touches my heart. It impels me to oblige with a few miracles. Personally I like the "one rap for yes, two for no" system. The ordeal of rapping off the letters of the alphabet is tiring on the muscles, hard on the nerves and one is constantly in danger of detection. Better mediums than I probably know this.

• • •

Spirit Writings

Spirit writing is an impressive business. I have seen ladies go into the semblance of a trance and dictate pages of strange rambling in handwritings quite foreign to their own. Encouraged by the muted plaints of their spectators, they would glibly write anything from a message from the most famous murdered person of the day to sprightly communications from Edward VII.

I suspect these facile spirit writers of being potential forgers, luckily diverting their talents to more innocent channels.

My favorite professional soothsayers are colored women; not because they are accurate, but because they can read delightful insinuations into the most prosaic lives. Furthermore, they are quick at finding the common denominator of human woes.

• • •

Astrology

The most majestic of all the prophetic arts is astrology. It is the only one that impresses me, probably because it has a sort of archaic wisdom and much poetry and beauty. I like its pagan terms and the antiquity of its phraseology. It is free from unpleasant suggestions of ghosts, haunts or meddlers from beyond the grave.

The music of the spheres has greater dignity than the rattling of a tambourine. And I would rather take advice from Jupiter, the God of Greater Fortune, than from some departed Uncle Henry.

I could not prove astrology nor have any of the proofs really convinced me. It is, at best, an empiric system. My willingness to believe in astrology is really very superficial, for I have a sceptical and unpsychic mind.

But my only superstition is a fear of a troubled day when I look in the newspapers and find that, alas, the Moon is in Capricorn.

CHANGING SEA

As we sit beside the ocean caves
And watch the breakers strike
We notice that the well-known waves

However I fain would hide—
And I think how like the changing sea
Is the summer girl at my side.

COUNTRY GENTLEMEN

What suckers we are to live in the city . . . Over the week-end, friends of this old gadabout, concerned with the sickly pallor of his cheeks and his increasing apathy toward food, packed his tooth brush, his razor and his moth-eaten knickers and whisked him away to a summer camp in New Hampshire.

We might as well report right now that but for the necessity of raking in the shekels required to keep Patty and Catherine Duffy—two young ladies whose appetites have not been affected in the least by their father's insane mode of living—you wouldn't be reading this today. For if we had our way, we'd still be up there leading the simple life in the mountain fastness.

What a glorious country! Ice-cold water—and what water!—from a bottomless well; swimming in clear, tree-shaded lakes; chipmunks, wild rabbits; climbing to "The Ledge," which commands a view such as these eyes have never before gazed upon; picking blueberries and, later, smothering them in cream so heavy that it could almost be cut with a knife . . . And while we're on the subject of cream, we must report that Harvey, who sold us the cream and lives on the adjoining farm—"just a spell up the rud"—looks and acts so much like Will Rogers that all the time you are talking to him you expect that he will break out the lariat and start twirling it any moment.

The high spot of the holiday came with the discovery of a bird's nest with three new-born birds hid den away in a bush of rambler roses in front of our camp.

Yes sir, we're suckers to live in the city. Just as soon as we get enough money we're going to turn our back on city life and get away to some hideaway like that. Then you'll only see us in the city on the rare occasions when we come to town to clip coupons or to catch up on the new shoes or the winter concerts.

MEMORY TEASERS

DO YOU REMEMBER WHEN—

Schrafft used to serve claret phosphate? The more timid gals used to sit back in a corner, order one of 'em and go cold all over with their speed and daring. And the day when one of the girls at high school went down to the Touraine Bar and had a cocktail with one of her boy friends—MY DEAR!

For 40c, at the Hotel Napoli, you could get a lunch consisting of bread sticks, soup, fish, an entree with vegetables, salad, ice cream, pudding or pie, demi-tasse and—last but not least—your choice of a bottle of wine, beer or ale. And if your appetite was poor, they threw in music to boot.

A certain wealthy Bostonian, famed for her idiosyncracies, refused to stand up in the dining room of the Touraine when the "Star Spangled Banner" was played? She said her soup would get cold!

The crap games on the Common were something to be seen?

Chinese Hold U.S. Doctor as Slayer

Shanghai, July 21 (AP)—Dr. Francis P. Tucker, treasurer of the William S. Porter Memorial hospital operated at Techow, Shangtung Province, by the American Board of Missions, was held at Tsinanfu today on a charge of slaying a native.

Chinese authorities, who took Dr. Tucker to Tsinanfu from Techow, refused to hand him over to the American consul. The arrest resulted from the fatal shooting last week by Dr. Tucker of a Chinese hospital employe.

HOTELS ARE HIT HEAVILY BY DEADBEATS

Hotel bill dodgers and bad check passers have increased tremendously since the depression began, and no relief in sight, declared Ralph Hitz, managing director of the Hotel New Yorker, who is attending the annual convention of the American Hotel Association at the Statler.

People who were good customers for years have suddenly turned "crooks," and many a gray hair is being added to hotel managers' heads by the condition.

"This doesnt mean that all our customers are that way," said Hitz, "but the number of people who are 'skipping' their bills and passing worthless checks has increased to such a degree that it is one of our chief problems."

Hitz returned from a five-week tour of Europe to attend the convention, and he states American hotels need not take their hats off to any of foreign hostelries.

AMERICAN HOTELS BEST

"From any standpoint—service, accommodations or the hotels themselves—American hotels are second to none in the world," he said. "There's one point where French hotels can say they lead us, however, and that is the small amount of petty thefts they experience.

"Thefts of towels, silverware and similar articles have always been a problem with us, but in some hotels in France there are enough knick-knacks in every room to make it a petty thief's paradise. I can just imagine setting out all the little objects in any hotel in this country. You'd turn around once and they'd all be gone.

"Hotels across the water are scaling their prices to more moderate rates, evidently deciding that their only salvation, the American tourist, will not stand for further raids on their purses."

FAVOR ADVERTISING

The convention today was featured by business sessions in the Statler ballroom. Gov. Ely, expected to make the opening address, was not able to attend.

A resolution to make the contract whereby hotels and newspapers cooperate in the exchange of accommodations for advertising space a legalized agreement was adopted by the publicity committee, headed by H William Klare of New York.

Tonight at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, a dinner-dance will be given. The convention ends Thursday.

2 ASK PARDONS IN AUTO FRAUD

Police officials and residents of Hudson and Marlboro tesified before the state advisory board of pardons at the East Cambridge House of Correction today, for Dr. Irving F. Armstrong of Hudson and George F. Delaney of Marlboro, a former insurance adjuster, who seek pardons.

Dr. Armstrong and Delaney are serving sentences in the institution for conspiracy in connection with insurance swindles in Middlesex County, based on fake auto accidents. The former is serving 15 months, the latter two years.

CHIVALRY DEAD? NO, NOT YET!

The old school of chivalry has not passed.

A Leicester Civil War veteran, reading in last week's papers of the plight of Newton women, who outnumber the men by 5000, wrote to John W. Murphy, chairman of the city's board of assessors, today and offered to provide a home for one of them—"a nice, middle-aged, single lady."

"I am the last Civil War veteran in this town, and I am willing to share my home and pension with a nice, honest, middle-aged, single lady in need of a home," the letter said.

"I need someone to take care of me, and I will thank you if you will put me in communication with such a lady and tell her to write to me."

I. C. C. DEFIES BECK THREAT

Washington, July 21 (AP)—Chairman Brainerd of the Interstate Commerce Commission said today the commission would not be influenced by threats into granting an immediate freight rate increase.

Brainerd wrote Senator Capper of Kansas in response to a telegram urging the commission to ignore demands for an immediate increase.

Senator Capper telegraphed the chairman of Rading what he termed a "treat" of Representative Beck of Pennsylvania to attempt to have the commission abolished unless it acted immediately on the railroad's plea.

"To my mind the Beck threat is even more short-sighted and more inopportune than the application of the railroads for this increase i nthe face of the general depression and lowering of all commodity prices and values and especially in view of the crisis facing agriculture and practically every industry at this time.

"I am astonished that as great a constitutional lawyer as Beck is reputed to be should wave the threat of congressional action over the heads of a governmental tribunal created for the purpose of substituting the rule of reasonable none for arbitrary action in the matter of transporation rates."

Capper said that against the loss of $400,000,000 in annual income by the railroads, agriculture had lost $2,800,000,000.

"The price of wheat today is 70 per cent below the pre-war level," he said. "Present freight rates are 47 per cent above the pre-war level."

MORALS FIGURE IN RAZOR SUIT

The "moral responsibility" of various 1930 directors of the Gillette Safety Razor Co., was discussed today in the hearing of the $21,000,000 suit of minority stockholders in Supreme Court, before Judge Priest.

Atty. Edward F. McClennan, counsel for Frank J. Fahey, treasurer and one of the directors, said the method of accounting was immaterial as the records had been kept that way for a long period of years.

The issue was the motives of the directors, he said: Fahey, he declared, was the only one to see the audits, and he saw them not as a director but as treasurer of the company.

Atty. William G. Thompson, for the plaintiffs, said evidence would show with the co-operation of John F. Aldred, Henry J. Fuller and perhaps George W. Pelham and Ralph Tomson, had a strangled-hold on the company.

James Willing, public accountant, testified that by the end of 1932 more than $10,000,000 in unrealized profits had been written into the surplus.

THIS IS LIFE

THE SUICIDE EPIDEMIC, HAVE WE MODERNS LOST OUR COURAGE?

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

TO AN OLD-FASHIONED PERSON like myself the newspapers are getting to be pretty painful reading nowadays, because of the constant and apparently more numerous reports of suicide. It may be my imagination, of course, but it does seem as if suicide is increasing in rather alarming fashion. Crimes of violence against the person are, perhaps, increasing in even greater proportion, but that seems curable. A speeding up of the processes of law, a living up by the judges to the penalties for crime, which are already provided by statute, a reform of this supposedly scientific "humanitarianism," which is putting the decent citizen at the mercy of the criminal, and our inferior type of citizen might think twice before he slugs light-heartedly and shoots without provocation.

But there is something about suicide which leaves one feeling helpless. It works from within. Crime with violence may be laid plausibly at the door of what we call loosely "social conditions," but the causes of suicide are probably no different than they have ever been. It is not impossible that man's resistance to trouble and misfortune is weakening badly.

* * *

Suicide Is Failure of Nerve

I remember being awakened one night when I was a boy by a telephone message which took my father out of the house. His best friend, I learned, had died. I also gathered that the man's business had been going very badly. My mother stood a long time at the window in the gray light of dawn. Once I heard her say softly: "He shouldn't have done it. He ought to have held on. What will his family do now?"

That is all I heard or ever did hear. My family didn't discuss painful things before the children. But I knew in a general way what had happened and I never forgot it. I remembered it often later when my own father seemed to be having about as much trouble as a man ought to have. Before he was 35 he had a business, which he had built up from nothing, smashed. He was driven to the wall by what in the '90s we called a "trust." He took what he had and started afresh and lost again. At 40 he had to start all over once more and for 20 years he had a pretty tough time of it.

Then when he was beginning to be comfortably established in a third business, he came down with what is usually considered an incurable disease, the result, I know, of long years of worry and anxiety and nervous overstrain. By sheer force of optimism and will power he kept himself alive for five years.

Had he succumbed to his first smashing defeat, or to his second, or to the long grinding anxieties of the later years, his sons would never have been educated nor his wife left secure. His nerve never failed him. His courage outlasted his body.

Suicide is only failure of nerve, and the fact that it is growing increasingly common is the most alarming thing about our present civilization. It is an inner softness of the spirit, a dread of suffering which is stronger than the will to live. And it is to be observed usually among people who have had it soft.

* * *

Pain Only Excusable Cause

There is one kind of suicide which I understand. The endless, unbearable physical pain of an incurable disease gives one the right to die, if anything does. It even gives one, I am inclined tothink, the right to assist the death of a beloved one. Certainly physicians should have the legal right to hasten the painless death of anyone to whom life can mean only continuous and long drawn-out agony. In this way the physician son in Warwick Deeping's novel, "Sorrel and Son," repaid his father for his years of sacrifice and care, and I think that most readers could not but approve.

But so many of these suicides of today seem to come from business reverses which in the nature of things are probably only temporary, from love affairs which time will certainly heal, from the estrangements and quarrels and disagreements which go to make up a part of the life of every person. Nervousness, psychic instability, egotism so great as to amount to derangement, headlong emotional response to momentary conditions—all these seem to be increasing in a civilization which, to put it bluntly, is making life altogether too easy for people.

A community that has to struggle for existence against the indifference of nature, that has to wring the means of life from nature by hard labor and severe self-denial, does not usually breed suicides. I am living at present in a community that two years ago lost its chief industry. There is little work to be had. Many have moved away to seek work elsewhere. But they have their bits of land to grow food upon, there is the sea to fish in, there are always odd jobs to be done. These people are not prosperous, but they are getting along. And there are no suicides among them.

* * *

We Lack Resource in Trouble

The trouble with our civilization today is that when the machinery breaks down in any way we have no resources to fall back on. For most city people when the job goes everything goes. There is a widespread sense of insecurity in the midst of the richest society the world has ever known. This undoubtedly has a serious effect on men's minds, but nothing, I think, compared with that inner softness, that lack of the austere of self-dependence, of the stern discipline of the spirit, which has always been characteristic of people who have had to depend on themselves.

The old gospel of individualism was a hard, cruel gospel. But it produced people who were able to stand the knocks of life, to face reverses without whimpering, who never thought of slipping out from life by a side entrance just because at the moment it looked too difficult to face. So much is done for us today that we expect everything to be done. Everywhere we are supported by a social system upholstered for our comfort. We are athletic, but not physically hardy; we are enterprising, but not enduring; we have our nerve with us, but it doesn't carry us very far. Something has happened to our courage. We have forgotten that the darkest hour is just before the dawn!

25 FLEE FIRE IN TENEMENT

Twenty-five persons were driven to the street as a two-alarm fire swept the three-story dwelling at 64-66 Glenway st., Dorchester, early today, while two families in a neighboring house also fled their homes before the blaze was extinguished.

The fire started in the second-story apartment at No. 66, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Shapiro, owners of the building, and their five children.

In addition to the Shapiro family, those driven out of the burning building were Mr. and Mrs. Israel Levine and their two children, Mr and Mrs Jacob Green and their children, Bernard, 10, and Edna, 2; Mr. and Mrs. Julius Sawyer and three children, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schuman and Mr. and Mrs. Israel Goodman and their daughter, Betty, 16.

GUESTS BID TO MALDEN TRIAL

Patrolman John G. Cronin of Malden will go on trial tonight before Police Commissioner Arteman B. Sweezey on charges of assault with his nightstick without provocation.

The trial has aroused interest, and a large crowd is expected The attendance will be appreciably swelled, it was indicated, by a list of invitations sent to neighboring police officials and friends by Miss Mary A. Cronin, the accused's sister, a registered nurse, veteran of the World War, and prominent in women's American Legion circles

She has invited guests to hear Officer Cronin's story of the encounter with Edward McGuinness, 21, on the morning of July 4. McGuinness declared the officer struck him repeatedly with his club and left him in a dazed condition on the sidewalk.

DUCK GUIDES FISHERMEN TO PRIZE

Points Like a Dog in the Field and the Boys Land a 600-Lb. Swordfish

Black cats may step aside now—at least in a seafaring way—in favor of black ducks.

It was a black duck, so help them which enabled the crew of the Portland fishing schooner Pocomo to break its streak of bad luck, and to bring in to Boston today, among other things, the largest swordfish caught locally in years—600 pounds.

Capt. Harry Mvett and all on board were discouraged when a black duck landed on the schooner's deck and circled in the gale.

Cook James Rawson stepped aboard and water and the duck ate and drank greedily For two days it stayed on—ate with the crew at each meal

Then the duck took to the air again and headed for Prince Edward Island.

"It's an omen," cried Rawson, and set sail.

The schooner raced to Brown's bank and the fish began to succumb immediately.

The prize swordfish had a total length of three feet and two inches, with head and tail cut off, measured 11 feet

CUSTER CLIMAX OF TROUBLES FOR RADICCHI

Radicchi, now held at the immigration station in East Boston because he is alleged to have overstayed his leave, has simultaneously lost his job as a bus boy in a hotel.

With his marital difficulties with the daughter of Dr. Harold Walker professor of surgery at Harvard Medical School, his inability to find any but menial jobs here, and now his tangle with the immigration authorities—Radicchi, the former dashing orchestra leader in Italy, has but ragged sentiments regarding America.

WED AFTER LONG FIGHT

The entanglements started immediately and it was not until Sept. 7, 1928, following battles both with the girl and her parents over the romance and place of marriage that it took place.

Even the ceremony did not halt trouble, and soon Radicchi sued his mother-in-law and father-in-law for $20,000 each, alleging that they had interfered with his marriage.

Radicchi's bride retaliated by filing suit for divorce, alleging cruelty and citing the first act of cruelty as the day after the marriage. She obtained a decree nisi on March 18, 1929, but less than a month later had the decree vacated.

DIVORCE ACTIONS PENDING

The former orchestra leader, however, filed a divorce suit later, and she filed a cross libel. Both are now pending

In the matter of employment here Radicchi has been equally unfortunate, his jobs being few and far between—and then of the menial variety.

Between these employments, according to his friends, he has been supported by members of Boston's Bohemian set.

Millions for Phone Work in Bay State

Massachusetts telephone offices and exchanges received $2,124,151 out of a total appropriation of $2,608,362 voted by the executive committee of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. today.

Appropriations for Boston and vicinity include $75,265 for central office equipment in Back Bay, $21,000 for exchange lines in West Newton, $34,935 for Roxbury and $28,160 for the Granite exchange, Quincy.

PARTING MAY BE FOREVER

A deportation order threatens to end the stormy five years in this country of Luigi Radicchi, former leader of an orchestra in Italy. Radicchi, who was married to Doris Walker, of Brookline, daughter of a Harvard professor, after a romance that started in Italy, is now held at the East Boston immigration station fighting the ouster order. Divorce actions brought by Mr. and Mrs. Radicchi are pending. (Staff photo.)

Million-Dollar Stolen Gem Racket Trailed by Detective; Crooked Lawyers Involved

By THE MASKED REPORTER

Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American

All Rights Reserved

Although the $150,000 gem robbery in the Copley-Plaza is still unsolved, I learned today that a number of Boston's most prominent stolen jewelry racketeers are facing prosecutions for the first time.

The Masked Reporter

A mass of evidence, linking local racketeers with national jewelry robberies and confirmations, exposed by The Masked Reporter, has been obtained, I am informed.

For the first time in the history of the racket, sufficient information has been gathered to send several "big shots" to jail, according to my informant.

It was not due to the activities of local authorities, however.

The evidence was gathered by New York detectives working for three national jewelers' associations, whose members have suffered repeatedly at the hands of Boston "sharpshooters."

ATTORNEYS IN CASE

It was put in shape by a prominent Boston attorney, who was selected because he never handles criminal cases and because his reputation is spotless.

It shows that the local racketeers have dealt in many thousands of dollars' worth of stolen jewelry, having handled $210,000 worth in a period of 37 months.

It lies up several well-known criminal lawyers with the racket, and one disbarred lawyer.

It showed the racketeers have conducted shady jewelry stores in Boston for many years under different names, as clearing houses for stolen jewelry.

One of the leading figures of the racket, the investigation revealed, is an international figure, as pointed out recently by the Masked Reporter. This is the man once described as making swings through the country, and to Havana, to pick up stolen gems."

"FENCE" IN INVOLVED

Another of the detectives found, is connected with many enterprises of various natures, some of them amusements. His right hand man in the racket, for years a consistent contact man for jewel thieves, has been urged by a number of insurance companies from receiving rewards, because of his reputation as a "fence." He has a relative who works with him, and for whom he recently tried to put through an insurance deal.

One well-known criminal lawyer, it was found, works with the racketeers as a "front" man, handling many of the jewels which they "kick back" for rewards. Another is a storer on stolen jewelry his

DAILY TRUE STORY
OF THE MODEST MANIKIN

LESSIE MOVED WITH SINUOUS GRACE

LESSIE MANNING moved with sinuous grace, as a model should move, and smiled the bright, artificial smile a model should wear as she slowly paced the long tea room of Wickers, the finest department store in the South.

Men and women stared at her openly, whispering flattering comments, appraising her from her silver slippered feet to the real pearls which encircled her throat. The evening gown she was showing was of orchid tulle, very frothy at the ankles, very tight about the hips. She turned, threading her way between rows of tables, toward the opposite end of the room.

But now her heart was pounding, and her cheeks were flushed. She was passing his table; but the tall, dark-haired young man didn't even glance up. Oh, it was cruel! How could he be so oblivious to her when her heart had gone out to him when first she saw him?

Lessie was a model from accident and necessity. She had wealthy relatives, but her father had quarreled with them years before, and she was too proud to turn to them for help when she lost her position. Instead, she accepted the only job that was offered her, and began clerking in Wickers.

Her unusual beauty and grace of carriage attracted the attention of old Mr. Wicker, and she was promoted to the position of model. She felt ashamed and cheapened; and recently she had increased her troubles by falling in love with a man who came regularly three times a week to the tea room, but who obviously didn't know that she existed.

Grandmother Wires Arriving for a Visit

That evening she found a yellow envelope waiting for her in her mail box. It was a telegram from her grandmother, Betty Manning, and said simply:

"Arriving 8 o'clock Friday for a visit."

The visit started propitiously, however. Betty Manning was delighted with Lessie's cooking and with her apartment, and praised her granddaughter for finding work these hard times.

"You are more like me than your father ever was," she declared.

"Tomorrow," she added, "I want to look up an old school friend, Lucy Smith, so don't expect me home until night."

"Don't get lost, darling," Lessie said, and kissed her good-bye. For that day at least, she told herself, she need not worry about her grandmother coming to the store.

Slowly, with sinuous grace, Lessie paced the tea room. She was smiling, but her heart was heavy, for she could think of no way for a modest manikin to meet a patron of the tea room!

Grandma Manning glanced at her, then started and nearly rose to her feet.

"But Lessie"—

The young man had risen. "If you would be kind enough to present mother and me, Mrs. Manning."

"This is my granddaughter, Miss Lessie Manning, Mrs. Smith and Mr. Eustice Smith."

"I am delighted to meet you, but please excuse me now."

On and on . . . She could feel eyes boring into her back, and was conscious of the usual ripple of admiration. Was this a fantastic dream? Grandma Manning knew him: his name was Eustice Smith, and she had been introduced to him. But Grandma Manning knew now that she was a manikin!

Round and round the room, all the diners might see and admire the backless turquoise taffeta evening frock. Past Eustice's table

Eustice looked at her fairly, the startled, wondering gaze of a young man who unexpectedly sees an earthly angel. On . . . and on . . .

Mrs. Manning was waiting for Lessie when the girl reached home.

"So you do your clerking in a backless gown and jeweled slippers?" she began. "I almost had a stroke when I saw you."

"I'm awfully ashamed of it," Lessie admitted, and burst into tears. "But, grandma—" and she poured out a torrent of explanations.

"Humph," sniffed the old lady, after she had finished, "I'm a bit more broad-minded than I used to be; and 'tisn't your fault you're—er—reasonably good looking. Come into the bedroom, child, and let me show you the dresses and things Lucy Smith helped me select."

"Who—are the Smiths?" Lessie ventured.

"Lucy's husband owns some tobacco factories, I believe. She was tickled to death to see me, and they are coming to lunch with us tomorrow. I told Lucy you were a good cook."

"Wh—at!"

"I'm proud of you," Grandma Manning admitted. "You're so different from your milk and water cousins. Eustice said he had never seen you before," she added. "I noticed," she chuckled delightedly, "he began making up for lost time immediately.

"Oh, grandmother, I—I like him, too." Her bright eyes met the shrewd older ones.

"I had just finished telling Lucy and Eustice all about your hard struggle to find work, and we had decided to find your counter and buy something, when I saw you."

"Please don't make fun of me!"

"He thinks the joke is on me. Anyhow, he hinted for an invitation to come around this evening, but I told him he'd have to phone and ask you."

"I haven't a decent frock to put on, granny!"

"Yes you have. I bought you a pink dress with a back in it, and a petticoat, today."

The telephone sounded, a long, compelling ring. Lessie flew to answer it, and when she spoke, there was a new depth to her clear voice.

"Yes," she said, "yes, Mr. Smith; any friend of Granny's is welcome. At eight-thirty; good-bye."

EX-FOLLIES GIRL NEEDS A LOT MORE BAIL

ARIDA DAVIS VAINLY CALLS FOR BOND

Blonde Star Gazer to Fight New York Extradition on Perjury Charge

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

A forlorn former Follies beauty who once was mistress of a fortune, today unable to raise $10,000 bonds, occupied a cell at the Charles st. jail, little concerned about the future—the future that she foretold for others as pensively she gazed into a cup of tea-leaves.

Mrs. Arida Davis, arrested yesterday on a charge of perjury in connection with her suit against a wealthy New Yorker's estate for $250,000, today retrospected the past—the past that was both glorious and tragic, and ending in disaster.

It was a past crowded with reminiscence of palatial homes and luxuries when she was the stage star toast of Broadway, of unhappy marriages and misfortunes which today find her lodged behind prison bars.

For the next 10 days, Mrs. Davis, whose bewitching eyes made her a Follies pet, will stay in jail unless her husband can obtain bail. This he fears he can't do because of extradition proceedings.

DENIES UNTRUTHS

Mrs. Davis, through her husband, denied she was fugitive from justice or that she lied when she claimed the late Joseph Moran, millionaire New York contractor and owner of the Jersey City Club of the International Baseball League, to be the father of her 14-year-old daughter.

Her husband said they would fight extradition. He declared his wife was innocent of wrong doing, that her big mistake was in her belief of the millionaire's promise that he would take care of "Peggy," the young daughter.

"Because she believed him she signed a paper for him denying his paternity of the child. My wife told me she could have married him, but she didn't want to," the husband explained.

Philosophically she remarked today:

"Some girls—like me—get themselves into trouble trying to be loyal. We don't want to get hardboiled so we get the worst of it in the end."

SOUGHT BETTER THINGS

From the time the beautiful Evelyn was enticed, a native of the Tennessee mountains, she longed to flutter with wealth and culture.

As a pretty ribbon counter clerk, she suddenly entered the life of a New York broker, William S. Gill, in 1918 with whom she lived six years.

Secretly she divorced him according to a pact mutually agreed upon the day the two were married in the Little Church Around the Corner. Gill went to Europe, returned and found his wife had secured a divorce in Chattanooga.

Gill instituted alienation of affection proceedings, but lost. He brought suit against his wife for the $75,000 he claimed he gave her, but received only a slight award.

BANKS IN WEALTH

More wealth came to the former actress, wealth which expressed itself in fine homes, yachts, automobiles and a reputation of mistress of a fortune.

But tragedy again entered and the former Follies queen found herself projected into a murder trial, and her husband, the alleged murderer. Her husband denied the crime, but the ordeal killed Evelyn's faith. Married only three years she was disillusioned. She said her husband proved "wine, woman and song." She refused to tolerate further abuse. Again the divorce courts.

TRUE TO HUSBAND

Her husband mentioned Joseph Moran's name. Evelyn was afraid.

"She hadn't seen Moran after she married Bennett," her present husband said. "She was true to him only."

"She urged me to quit flying and I did," Davis said. We started a restaurant. Later we opened a tea room in New York, adding a feature tea-leaf reading. We made money.

"One day the place was crowded and the reader failed to show up. Arida donned the costume and substituted. She did a great job and continued that line.

"We were helping out a friend at Revere Beach when my wife was arrested. We knew nothing about the indictment. It came as a bombshell.

"Moran gave my wife plenty of money. There are cancelled checks to prove it. She has been a wonderful mother to these two girls. They are both in private schools. She lives for them."

Wig Wearing Astrologist Fights Extradition; Once Had $500,000

Mrs. Arida Davis, Revere Beach astrologer, continues to fight extradition to New York, where she is wanted in connection with a perjury charge. She is held in $10,000 bail. Mrs. Davis is the mother of three children. (Staff photo.

EVELYN FARRIS, THE ACTRESS

Mrs. Davis was formerly Evelyn Farris, film actress and show girl. She is shown as she appeared in a movie made in 1926. She once had half a million, but never explained where she got it from. During this summer Mrs. Davis has been appearing at Revere Beach in the role of an astrologist, wearing a black wig over her famous blond tresses. (International News photo.)

IN PREVIOUS COURT TANGLE

This photo of Evelyn Farris, now Mrs. Davis, was made in 1922, during court proceedings, when Evelyn was grilled as to a half-million dollar legacy. $500 IN JEWELS GONE

Jewelry valued at $500 was stolen early today by thieves who shattered a window at the shop of Carl H. Skinner Co., Inc., on Boylston st., near Arlington st. Miss Virginia Lemonski is shown pointing to the shattered window.

OFFICER HELD IN HIT-RUN CASE

Patrolman Michael Hurley of station 11, Dorchester, pleaded not guilty in Quincy court today to drunkenness and driving while under the influence of liquor, and was released on $100 personal recognizance, for hearing July 29.

Hurley's machine is alleged to have crashed into a car driven by John H. Dolan of Poplar st., Roslindale, last night, at Adams st. and Furnace brook parkway.

Dolan told police Hurley drove away with his lights switched off after the crash. He gave chase and brought about the policeman's arrest.

Missing Boy Turns Up at His Home

William R. Boyd, 13, who was missing Sunday night from the boys' camp that is conducted in Chatham, on Cape Cod, was safe at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Boyd, Jr., of 70 Paul Revere rd., Arlington Heights, today. It was the first time that the lad had been away from home in a camp, and becoming homesick, he took French leave.

Planning Commission Meets Next Tuesday

The special commission created by the legislature to consider laws relating to zoning, town planning and billboards will hold a preliminary public hearing on July 28 at 10:30 a. m. Special notices have been sent to billboard companies, planning boards, real estate exchanges and other interested persons.

HUGHES SWOONS IN COURT ROOM AT NINE MONTHS JAIL TERM

APPEALS, THEN DECIDES TO SERVE TIME

Mate of Ex-Follies Girl Who Died to "Reform" Him Is Guilty in House Break

Charles F. Hughes, whose Follies girl wife killed herself to "make him a better man," today was sentenced with a companion to a term in the House of Correction for attempted breaking and entering in the night time.

Hughes, given nine months, paled and partially collapsed as he heard the words of Judge Philip F. Parker, who pronounced sentence in Brookline Municipal Court. He was assisted to his chair by a court officer.

His companion, William J. Frasier, took his sentence of six months more stoically, and immediately appealed

According to Patrolman Thomas Hourihan, the arrested Hughes and Frasier as they attempted to enter a home in St. Paul st., Brookline, on the night of June 28.

Hughes' beautiful wife, Ethel, shot herself in March, and in a dying statement said she had turned the gun on herself in despair over her husband's continual drinking

Two months later Hughes himself was brought to City Hospital with a bullet in his abdomen which he first said was self-inflicted. Later he said he was shot by hold-up men.

Lynn Man Drowns in Fall From Raft

Kaufman was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edel Kaufman, and formerly attended English high school in Lynn.

MAYOR PEEKS AT HIMSELF IN OILS

ERNEST DE NAGY

A painting of Mayor Curley by Ernest de Nagy, former artist to Hungarian royalty and now court painter at Luxembourg, was turned over to the mayor today. The painting is to hang in the administration building at the City Hospital. Here is the mayor, the artist and the painting posed for the Boston Evening American photographer.

MAYOR CURLEY

MAYOR CURLEY GETS PAINTING

The portrait of Mayor Curley, painted by Ernest de Nagy, former artist to Hungarian royalty, was turned over to His Honor today in his office at City Hall.

The portrait shows the mayor seated at a desk in the library of his Jamaicaway home, where it was painted. After accepting it, Mayor Curley arranged to have it sent to City Hospital where it will be hung in the administration building.

BOSTON JEWEL RING TRACED

Upping off the gang to prospective "takes."

Noel Scaffa, well-known New York detective who is employed by the jewelers' associations, is the man responsible for gathering the evidence in this city.

Scaffa was sent here after his employers had been "clipped" for $200,000 in the Boston district in 37 months.

He mapped out a plan, and was told to go ahead with it. As a result, he brought two men to Boston, one of them a former New York city detective. He showed them certain spots with which he was acquainted through previous dealings with the sharpshooters here, and pointed out persons he knew to be bond and jewel thieves. Then he returned to New York.

LAWYER ON THE JOB

The two detectives remained here 12 weeks, at no time communicating with each other by telephone and occupying widely separated lodgings

When the investigation began to close in on the heads of the racket a local attorney was retained to represent the jewelers' association. For the purpose they wanted a man who made a practice of having nothing to do with the criminal cases and whose reputation was beyond suspicion. They retained such a man, a prominent member of the Boston Bar Association, and I understand he did an excellent job

Not only did he put the evidence in legal shape, so that if necessary it can be presented in local courts but he also obtained the business and personal background of the "big shots" in the racket.

A perusal the jewelers' associations have the criminal history of most of the stolen jewelry racketeers. Whether they will turn their evidence over to the authorities or save it for the protection of their clients, I don't know. I do know, however, that the associations are jubilant and claim they have enough data to build airtight cases against some of the most prominent men in the racket here.

They represent 112 insurance companies throughout the country which insure large amounts of jewelry, and some of which have frequently been victimized by the Boston gang. These companies are warned daily of risks

Scaffa is non-committal as to what course will be pursued with the evidence.

"It is my belief," he said, "that we are now at a point where we will be able to deal with persons connected with national jewel larcenies." That was all.

GET THE EVIDENCE

However, there is no question about the evidence. They've got it

For example, they learned that the contact man with the association who has been barred from receiving rewards, has a "front" who is a relative by marriage. Some time ago this man was robbed in the neighborhood of his home. He carried two insurance policies for robbery, and was able to collect on one. The other was not paid and he is now threatening suit. Probably the investigation will knock that play down

They also learned a lot about the lawyers who are connected with the racket. One of them, they found has been in trouble with the Bar Association and his position is none too secure. The other has handled many criminal cases.

The detectives obtained important evidence concerning 1700 rings of a special design which were stolen from an auto in Brooklyn. They were found in a jewelry store here, and although the proprietor claimed to have purchased them he handed them over without a murmur, all except three which had been sold.

"For two years I was bothered with pimples and blackheads. They were on my chin and forehead, and later broke out on my neck: The pimples were scattered and were hard and red. Oftentimes they burt and caused me great discomfort.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased some. After a few days' use I could see that the pimples and blackheads were disappearing. I continued using them and in about four weeks my skin was all cleared up. I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Bernadette Marmin, Fort Kent Mills, Me., Feb. 9, 1931.

FIRST 2 NEWS TIPS PRIZES ARE DIVIDED

Scarlet Fever Scare at Devens and Red Demonstration Are Winners

Quick" to find and give tips about real news, two who divide first prize in last week's Boston Evening American's Weekly Newstips Contest have asked the American to withhold publication of their names.

One of them is an East Milton resident who gave the first tip on the scarlet fever scare at Camp Devens. The other lives in East Boston and the tip was about the Red demonstration at the Immigration station. Each received $7.50.

Modesty about publicity also prevents publication of the names of two who tied for second prize of $10. It goes to residents of Somerville and of Auburndale. One story related to an automobile accident in which F. Lyons Young, ex-speaker of the House, was injured. The other was on the credit union shortage story. Each received $5.

The third prize of $5 was for a tip on the mysterious death of a Cochituate man, and for assistance on the story. It was won by a resident of Cochituate

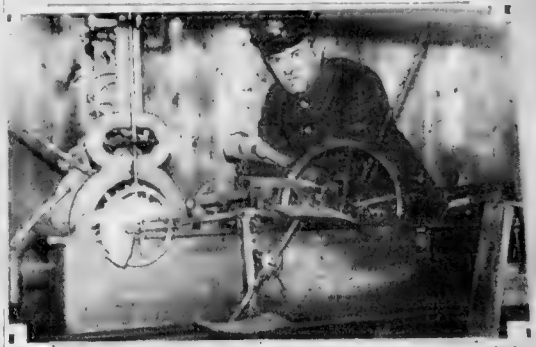
Other awards were to Marion Fay of 4008 Washington st., Roslindale for tip on fatal auto crash in Dedham. Another to a person who does not wish his name published, for tip on the Winthrop Beach rescue

Mrs. Mary Caradonna, of 87 Lexington st., East Boston, was awarded a prize for tip on arrival of parents of Frank Carideo, noted Notre Dame football star. Vincent Permatteo of 1107 Winthrop ave., was also give an award for a tip on Revere suicide story.

Another award was to a resident of Belmont who desires name withheld, for a tip on false alarm.

Dennis O'Hare of 5 Milford st South End, was given an award for tip on public taxi stand on Franklin st. Clement Connolly of 58 Bickford ave., Revere, for tip on Point of Pines bridge crush; another to a modest tipster who gave information on three South Boston accidents

HE KEEPS THE TIME FOR OTHERS TO DO



Prisoners doing time in Charles st. jail have it kept for them by Fireman James Collins of Ladder 24, who turns this every week as he winds the mainspring of the giant clock on the jail tower. 1300 FARMERS inspired by a common ideal—

"Healthier Milk"

Stop your car by a farm at milking time, some fine day in the fertile Vermont Valley.

The bronzed chap who comes to meet you is quite apt to be a graduate of one of the country's leading agricultural colleges. His is one of the 1300 farms selected to furnish First National Stores with Brookside milk. And before you talk to him long you will sense that he is as proud of that fact as he is of his prize cows. Because it means that on his farm are observed the highest standards of cleanliness and sanitation known to dairy farming. He is one of the 1300!

Watch the elaborate precautions for cleanliness that are observed in the apparently simple operation of milking. Far more than are required by the government. But they are rigidly observed by every one of the 1300 farmers who sell their milk through the Bellows Falls Co-operative Creamery to First National Stores.

No wonder it has established new high standards in the public mind.

LOVE IS OFTEN MUCH LIKE A HOLIDAY

By HELEN ROWLAND

LOVE IS something like a holiday. We look forward to it so eagerly and back on it with such a headache.

• • •

It is almost as hard to find a rolling-pin in the modern woman's house as it is to find a Bible in a modern man's traveling bag.

• • •

A good wife is always her husband's "guide, philosopher and friend"—also his guardian, dietician, conscience, timetable and back-seat driver.

• • •

Married life is like writing these little paragraphs. It looks so easy and simple, until you've tried it every day for five or ten years.

• • •

Imagination is not dead—it is merely working in a new direction. Many a woman thinks of herself as a siren and many a man thinks of himself as God's Gift to Women, who would otherwise be two nice, endurable people.

• • •

Lovers look forward to marriage as a trip to the Seventh Heaven, but very few of them have the foresight to perceive that Fate is handing them a round-trip ticket.

• • •

When a man urges a woman to be "reasonable," he must have ceased to want her to be in love with him, because no woman on earth has ever been known to be both at the same time.

• • •

There are almost no "men of letters" nowadays; they are all men of postcards and telephone calls.

• • •

When you see a "stylish stout" in a cutey-cutey, high-water jersey bathing suit or a pair of bright flowered pajamas, you wonder whether she is suffering from mental delusions or just hasn't got a full-length mirror in the house.

Long engagements are becoming fashionable—because it takes so much time to procure the preliminary divorces.

No Proof That Cancer Is Inherited

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

ALMOST everybody has a great fear of cancer. This apprehension is increased when there is a history of cancer in the family. I can readily appreciate and understand this feeling. But it is absurd to assume that because a grandparent or parents has been afflicted with this disease that it will be transmitted to the offspring.

Dr. Copeland

The tendency for cancer to run in certain families has been recognized for a long time. However, there is no proof that cancer is definitely a hereditary condition. It may be true that an individual belonging to a family in which there have been many cases of cancer, is more liable to the disease than another individual whose family has not been afflicted with it.

It is important for us to understand more thoroughly the mechanism by which cancer is inherited. This has not been definitely determined, but much information has been developed within the past 10 years. An individual inherits, not the disease itself, but a tendency toward cancer. Of this account certain individuals should be on guard against this disease.

It should be remembered that cancer, recognized in its early stages, is usually curable. Because of this fact individuals belonging to cancerous families and on the outlook for trouble are often much better off than others who never suspect the possibility of acquiring the disease.

Most persons are apt to be careless and negligent in regard to the general health. Sometimes the underlying cause of ill health is a cancerous growth. If recognized early, it can be removed, either by surgery or by other methods at our disposal. The disease can be entirely eradicated. When neglected and surgery is resorted to merely as a last resource, the results are less favorable.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

F.R.S. Q—Would a teaspoonful of salt taken in warm water every morning tend to clear the complexion? Is this harmful in any way?

2—Upon doing any close work my eyes become bloodshot—is this a sign of strain? What can be done to relieve the condition?

A—It is unwise to take too much salt. Why not correct your diet and take plenty of exercise—this will keep the system in proper order and also clear your complexion. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2—Have your eyes examined—you probably need glasses.

The Beauty Box

WHEREAS, IN the past, the lip stick staged a red riot, being applied with carelessness and heavy pressure, now it skims lightly o'er the rosebud mouth, providing the lips with a faint, but necessary color support that seems essential, in the well-being of the femme. Too heavy a smear gives the pretty girl a hard look, and doesn't do a bit of good to the facial scenery of a plain one. New colors in lip sticks are natural tones, supposed to be on friendly terms with rouge.

Baron Gets Pearls of Dancer

ON THE dressing table by the mirror lay the suitcase quite peacefully, innocently reflecting the gleam of the flashlight from its leather surface.

Steady, thought Gaigern, pulling himself together, for the excitement of the chase began to rush to his head. First he put his right hand into his right pocket—the safe custody, for it was still breeding and there it would have to remain to prevent its doing anything and leaving traces behind. He held the flashlight between his teeth.

With his gloved left hand he carefully laid hold of the suitcase. Yes, there it was. His fingers rested on the smooth and polished leather. He turned out the flash and put it down, and then paused for reflection. He knelt down in front of the dressing table—now the floor creaked ominously as if it were alive—and grasped the case with his left hand in the darkness. No, no, he thought and let it go again. Such things brought bad luck.

Pocketbooks, cases, purses—they were all sinister things. They had a tendency to refuse to be burned, to emerge again from the rivers into which they were thrown, to be discovered in drains by sewer men, and finally to be laid almost conscientiously on the table during criminal proceedings. Also, it was not very pleasant to face two and a half meters across a surface as smooth as ice with a suitcase weighing about four pounds between one's teeth. Gaigern drew back his hand and thought again.

He turned on the flashlight and gazed at the two locks of the little case in deep absorption. God alone knows what secret mechanism kept Grusinskaya's treasure safely shut up there. As an experiment Gaigern took out a tool and pressed it in the round brass disc of the lock.

The lock sprang up.

The case was not locked at all! Gaigern started at the snap of the spring. It was so utterly unexpected that his face for the moment looked perfectly blank. "Well, that's good," he said to himself three or four times. "Well, that's good." He raised the lid and opened the jewel case. Yes, there lay Grusinskaya's pearls.

They were no more after all than a little heap of baubles, very little, if you think of it, compared with all the tales that had been spread abroad about this gift of a murdered grand duke for the adornment of a dancer's neck. An old-fashioned and charming sautoir and a rope of medium-sized but perfectly matched pearls, three rings, two earrings with incredibly round and large pearls—there they lay tidily in their little bed of velvet while the flashlight waked their slumbering reflections. Taking every precaution, Gaigern removed them from their case with his gloved left hand and put them in his pocket. It struck him as so ridiculous to have come upon these pearls lying open and unprotected that he felt a reaction almost of sobering disappointment. He was exhausted after tremendous exertions, which after all were superfluous. For a moment he even wondered whether he might not simply regain his room along the passage. Perhaps they have left the bedroom door open as well, he thought, with the incredulity which since his first sight of the pearls had kept his upper teeth exposed in a foolish and childish smile.

The door, however, was locked. In the corridor the elevator could be heard ascending at irregular intervals, and the gold closing with a click. Gaigern sat for a few moments in an arm chair in the dark and collected his strength for the return journey. His hunting for a solution was maddening. But he did not dare smoke in case the smell left a clue. He was as resourceful as a savage who guards himself against a taboo.

Gaigern put his nose out on to the balcony and sniffed. As he pushed past the gently swelling curtain he had already observed that something was not as it should be. It took a few seconds before he realized what it was—his face and body were lighted up in a way they had not been before. He shrank back with the rapidity of instinct into the darkness of the room. And there he stood, breathing quickly and straining every nerve. From some distant part of the great city the hour struck faintly from a church tower—11 o'clock. The walls of the houses across the street were bright and dark by turns as the electric signs winked on and off again. "Damn the luck," Gaigern muttered, went out on to the balcony.

The big electric lamps on the front of the hotel had gone out. Below in the street a small crowd stood and stared with delight at the hotel front, where the four new lights went spasmodically on and off. Among them was a policeman. Traffic was held up and motor cars were loudly showing their impatience. The electric signs opposite were in full play, proclaiming brands of champagne and doing their utmost to illuminate the hotel front. Finally two men in blue overalls crept out of a window of the empty bow, established themselves on the glass roof over the main entrance and began to investigate the faulty wires. Now that the hotel front was a center of interest the way back across those seven meters of it was finally blocked.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

DESIGNED FOR COURT

White Satin Favorite Material

—SKETCHED IN PARIS—

Miss Mildred Hockstader, of Purchase, N. Y., wore this gown from Molyneux at her recent presentation at the Court of St. James. Heavy white satin is the material used for the gown and long square train. Diagonal piecings lend interest to the top of the skirt, which is somewhat circular and of even length all around. A diamond circlet held in place the three Prince of Wales feathers and tulle veil and Miss Hockstader carried a white feather fan.

His Father's a 'Good Egg,' But He Can't Dance a Step!

By WINIFRED BLACK

Winifred Black

So heavens, what a nitwit he is about all the things that count. He can't dance a step, it gives him the willies to drive a car, and the neckties he wears are beyond belief.

Herbert Junior can't see how it is that people act as if Herbert Senior really amounted to a whole lot.

Mrs. Herbert Senior thinks it's perfectly awful for Herbert Junior to talk that way about his father, but she can see what junior means. Herbert Senior is an particular. Now the other night when the Mortimer Drexels were in for dinner, Herbert Senior went into the library and had a long talk with a perfectly awful man. Somebody from the Middle West that he knew when he was a boy. And Mrs. Herbert Senior had to go in after him three times. He said the Mortimer Drexels were all right, but he'd rather have 10 minutes with good old Bill Hanks from his old home town than to spend an evening gabbing golf and stocks with Mortimer Drexels.

Herbert Senior's secretary likes Herbert Senior, but he just can't see how he ever got where he is.

He forgets his own name, and if it wasn't for the secretary he'd never know what his bank balances was, and his club dues either would be paid twice over, or not paid at all.

Why, the secretary has to call him up and remind him of a directors' meeting. The secretary was offered a better salary somewhere else, but he just didn't have the heart to leave Herbert Senior to the mercy of the world.

Herbert Senior?

Oh, he knows what all these people think about him. Some times it makes him a little sad, and sometimes it makes him laugh.

"No man is a hero to his valet," whoever said that told the truth, didn't he? You see, valets have such strange standards—the way a man has his hair cut, and the sort of tie he wears—these are the all-important things.

But some day, when Herbert Senior is gone, and Herbert Junior tries to "carry on," and everybody gets the best of him, everywhere, everything, he'll be apt to think that maybe he did not quite appreciate Herbert Senior—after all.

Fashion Note

WHY BE DELICATE is the query of the new beach clothes and so this year's crop are all of virile fabrics, very little printed, silk being used. For instance, a smart beach ensemble uses blue flannel for jacket and pants, with a bodice, top of white pique and a cap and sash of red woolen jersey.

Grace Lies in Regal Frocks

By PARIS BUREAU.

PARIS, July 21—Perhaps the printed descriptions of the gowns worn at the British courts each year do sound rather dull and similar. But just the same, these gowns are exquisitely beautiful with an old world grace that is cleverly combined with the current mode, without detracting from the essential dignity and simplicity of the costume.

For despite the rich materials, and embroideries and long court train, there is a simplicity about a court frock that is most attractive

And the feathers and veil of the prescribed headdress are undeniably attractive and not at all ostrichlike when worn in the surroundings for which they are intended. Each year, dressmakers here vie with each other in creating lovely gowns for the courts at Buckingham Palace. And every year some women do call the court frocks old-fashioned and old-looking, there never seems to be a dearth of candidates for the honor of wearing such a frock at a presentation at the Court of St. James's.

After seeing the lovely presentation frock that Molyneux made for Miss Mildred Hockstader of Purchase, New York, we felt sure that the readers of this page would be interested in a sketch and description of it. It is of heavy white satin and there is a long square train. Diagonal piecing lend interest to the top of the skirt which is circular and of even length all around. A diamond circlet held in place the regulation three Prince of Wales feathers and tulle veil and a white feather fan was carried.

Stick to Wife, Urges Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm a painter by trade, and therefore, with mixing paint and turpentine, I have a slight odor of some about me which I cannot get rid of by the time I get home. So my wife makes it very unpleasant for me with her constant remarks about it. I wouldn't mind so much, but she does it even in front of my friends. Sometimes I think it would be best for me to leave her. Please try to help me to decide what I should do. A. T.

Dear A. T.: I may say in justification of your wife's antipathy for the smell of paint that your constant contact with the smell has dulled your perceptions. I certainly would not advise you to leave on this account. Make another effort to get rid of the odor. Have you tried leaving your overalls at the place where you work, and changing your outer garments when you come home? I might suggest further that perhaps at the paint store they might tell you about "killing the odor of paint."

Not Such a Hopeless Case

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There is a young man with whom I have been for four times and who has treated me wonderfully. He asked me for a date on a certain day and I told him that I had an engagement. He then asked if he could see me on Saturday of the week, and I said "Yes", but to telephone me that day first. It happened that I was engaged that day since then and I have not heard from him. He was so wonderful to me that I cannot believe the end has come so soon. What do you think? S. F. 2D.

Dear S. F.: I can see no impropriety whatever in your calling up or writing to the young man with whom you have been out on four occasions. You have a perfectly good excuse; you were waiting to get a message from him and only found out later that the receiver was off the hook.

MAKE MOST OF MELON SEASON

By MARTHA LEE.

WHERE do you suppose I met one of our club members the other day? Right down at a nearby fruit stand. We were both poking an experimental finger into the ends of round, ribbed cantaloupes and shiny, bald-headed honeydews, looking for the ripest, and flattering ourselves that we could pick the best. And then we looked up and saw each other, and soon parted to trundle our melons home, put them in the ice box and look forward to the next event, whether we are going to serve them for breakfast or for the perfect end of a summer dinner.

Martha Lee

Now that raspberries are with us, do try chilled canteloupe filled with raspberries which been standing sprinkled with sugar for half an hour or so. Or with crushed, chilled pineapple. The blending of flavors is something that methinks the old Romans would have envied us, epicures though they may have been. And don't forget to try the combination of fresh lime juice squeezed over your wedges of chilled honey-dew. Oh, Lady!

I don't have to remind you either of vanilla ice cream in cantaloupe for Sunday dessert, and there are these two cantaloupe surprises to try out on an appreciative family.

CANTALOUPE CUP

Scoop out the pulp from two small cantaloupes and cut in cubes. Add crushed pineapple to equal half the bulk of the cantaloupe and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Chill thoroughly and serve in tall stemmed glasses. Serves 6.

CANTALOUPE SALAD

1 large canteloupe
1 sweet pepper
Mayonnaise
½ cup pecan meats

Cut the cantaloupe into six lengthwise sections. Remove pulp and cut into pieces. Mix with the pepper, which has been cut fine. Replace on rind, put a spoonful of mayonnaise on top of each serving and sprinkle with coarsely chopped nut meats. Serve ice cold. Serves 6.

Household Hints

COSTUME JEWELRY, so popular now, is very effective, but apt to stain one's neck and arms if not kept very clean. Give it a bath in baking soda and warm water. Rinse and dry carefully. This will do away with those greenish marks.—Julia B. Marsters, East Sandwich.

ONE COOK, noted for her doughnuts, drops a few whole cloves into the kettle of boiling fat she fries them in.—Miss Gladys Smith, Charlestown, N. H.

Garden Girl Says

"SOAK THE soil thoroughly when it is necessary to water. Evenings or early mornings are best for this work, as then the water has a better chance to penetrate the soil instead of evaporating into the air. Do not water more rapidly than the soil can absorb it."

Canning Comment

HOME CANNING improves the family menu, saves the family purse, and saves the housewife's time later when a generously stored preserve closet helps her get meals with a minimum of labor.

When to Serve the Coffee

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When serving refreshments which consist of hot chicken patties or a salad, sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and cake, after an evening of bridge, at what time should the coffee be brought in? This is to settle a little difference of opinion.

QUESTION BOX

There always will be a difference of opinion about the time for the serving of coffee for such occasions, for some people are so fond of coffee that they like to have it served at once with the supper, and other people like to have it "afterwards." The best thing, therefore, is obviously to ask each guest when he or she prefers to have the coffee.

Off-White Shade Better

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly tell me whether etiquette will permit the use of a white veil with an egg shell wedding gown? F. G.

Yes, this is all right, although it would be more effective if you have your veil of an off-white shade.

Sanitary Risk

in carelessly-made substitutes for Kotex

SAFETY should be your first concern in sanitary protection. Health safety. The kind of safety you are certain of in Kotex, the pad that is used in leading hospitals.

But how about those nameless substitutes, of whose makers you know nothing? What assurance have you of their sanitary safety? Who made them? Where? How? Are you sure you'd use them, if you knew their origin?

There's one certain way of avoiding risk. Ask for Kotex. Genuine Kotex. It's immaculately clean—made by wonderful, patented machines from start to finish, in surroundings of hospital cleanliness.

Kotex is splendidly comfortable. It may be worn with perfect safety on either side. Soft, filmy layers make adjustment easy. Treated to deodorize. Readily disposable.

SHARKEY-WALKER GATE MAY HIT $250,000 MARK

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

The Gang Hits Trail. Head for New York. Big Milk Fund Bout.

Sharkey Should Win. Battle Will Be Hot As Far as It Goes

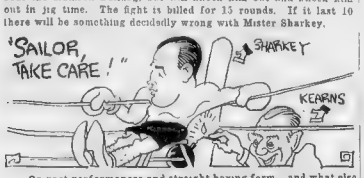
An Uncamouflaged View With the Bark On

They're heading down to Gotham to see the Milk Fund Scrap. And, folks, we think that Sharkey'll dump Walker in their lap. Yes, Jack should stop The Bulldog, but despite the Sailor's blasts The scrap should be a pippin—as long as Mickey lasts.

The biggest crowd leaving Boston for a sporting event since Jack Sharkey fought Jack Dempsey at the Yankee Stadium five years ago is pulling up tent pegs and hitting the trail for New York today. The exodus already has started. This morning the auto paths leading to Bagdad-on-the-Subway were black with honking gas buggies. Steamship and railroad men report a flood of reservations for boats and trains leaving for New York this evening and tomorrow morning. Bostonians are fight hungry. They haven't had the chance of "going to the big fight" in a year. The herd wants to be turned out to pasture. This is vacation time when going a-gypsying gets into one's blood. Tomorrow night's Sharkey-Walker duel for the Milk Fund satisfies the big craving for excitement, thrills, gypsying, that out-of-town trip, a day in the Big City, a stroll on Broadway, and every Bostonian who has the chance is making the most of it.

When the gang hits the Big Town, what is it going to see? When the gong clangs in the late Squire Ebbets' big ball yard in Flatbush tomorrow night, what kind of a fight spectacle is going to unreel before the biggest throng that ever was jammed into the front yard of Uncle Wilbert Robinson's Dodgers?

The fans should see a great scrap—while it lasts. In this humble scribe's opinion it isn't going to last long. We may be all wet, but as we look at it Smiling Mickey Walker, good little man as he is, doesn't belong in the same ring with the Big I Man of Boston. Unless the Squire of Chestnut Hill has gone so far back that he'll have to use a telescope to find himself, he not only will beat the Rumson Bulldog, but will knock him out and knock him out in jig time. The fight is billed for 15 rounds. If it last 10 there will be something decidedly wrong with Mister Sharkey.



On past performances and straight boxing form—and what else can we go by?—the only chance of Mickey Walker beating Sharkey tomorrow night is to "phoenigle" him out of it. With Jack Kearns and his rang in the enemy's front line trenches Squire Sharkey, Two-Chair Johnny Buckley and the Sharkey entourage want to be ready for anything, for there is nothing that wily, foxy Jack Kearns will not "pull" tomorrow night to return Walker a winner. Jack Kearns will not miss a single, solitary chance to ring in a cold deck. It will not do Messrs. Sharkey and Buckley to let down one iota on their eternal vigilance until the fight is over and all hands have left the ring. Sharkey and Buckley know all about Mr. Kearns. If anything happens tomorrow night to blast Sharkey off the fistic map it will be their own fault.

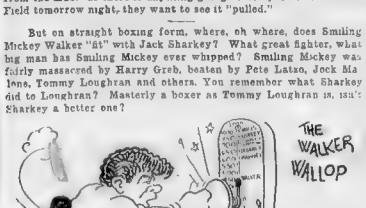
'Gainst heavies he's as kickless as Prohibition beer
But watch the Perfumed Pilot, of Kearns keep on the alert,
Or you'll wake up ahowling that he has taken your shirt!

Remember Kearns will get plenty of assistance. The Schmeling crowd and the Carnera mob are standing at Kearns' shoulder and uniting in a common cause to get Sharkey out of the way. Square Sharkey, figuratively, has put himself right in the middle of a hornets' nest. He knows that and a good percentage of the boxing crowd knows it, too. That is one reason for today's exodus from the Hub. If there is anything going to be "pulled" at Ebbets Field tomorrow night, they want to see it "pulled."

But on straight boxing form, where, oh where, does Smiling Mickey Walker "fit" with Jack Sharkey? What great fighter, what big man has Smiling Mickey ever whipped? Smiling Mickey was fairly massacred by Harry Greb, beaten by Pete Latzo, Jock Malone, Tommy Loughran and others. You remember what Sharkey did to Loughran? Masterly a boxer as Tommy Loughran is, was Sharkey a better one?



There has been more "puffle" printed about Walker than on any fighter in years. The statement that "with the exception of Jack Dempsey, Jack Sharkey never has faced a hitter like Mickey Walker" should set the whole fight world laughing. Do you think Mickey packs a punch with as much dynamite in it as the ones Sharkey faced when he crawled through the ropes against Harry Wills, George Godfrey, Max Schmeling, Jim Maloney, Floyd Johnson and Jack Delaney? All those heavies packed punches which make Mickey Walker's seem like a cream puff.

If this is so, some may ask, if Walker has such little chance of whipping Sharkey, then why do you think it will be a great scrap? We reiterate we think it will be a great scrap—while it lasts—because Smiling Mickey is of the type to make it a great scrap. Smiling Mickey is a rushing, tearing, slashing, ripping fighter with the heart of a bulldog. There isn't a speck of yellow in Mickey's makeup big enough to cover a fly's egg. He'll be in there blazing away with both hands as long as he can get up his hands or his legs hold him up. When Mickey goes down tomorrow night he will go down with his boots on.

The fight should warm the cockles of the heart of every fan.
For Mick's a little terror and almost everybody knows
If he goes down tomorrow he'll have boots on when he goes!

FAULTY TIMING MAY DEFEAT SHARKEY

By JAMES J. CORBETT
Former Heavyweight Champion of the World

Copyright 1931 by General Service Inc.

New York, July 21 (US)—When the Jack Sharkey-Mickey Walker battle first was proposed, the boys were inclined to give it a laugh and forget all about it.

But sentiment has changed.

Of a sudden, the folk who like to figure out who'll be who in the sporting column do not quite put Sharkey's name in the parade going to type that they have attempted in a long time.

Since then, what the Sharkey of 1929 or 1930 perhaps could take Walker without much difficulty now is a horse of another color. Jack has picked out of Sharkey's camp, he has grown extremely rusty during a year of idleness and is victim of faulty timing, and seems to have skidded somewhat.

The difference between a great fighter and a palooka is timing, just as timing marks the difference between victory and defeat. Sharkey, in his fights in other years, went on to triumph because his punch, for one thing, was coordinated and, thus, his timing was splendid.

The latter loses on the appearance of a comparatively even affair and one wherein ring cunning and generalship may prove to be the deciding factors.

SPECTACULAR BATTLE IS PREDICTED

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright 1931, Universal Service, Inc.

New York, July 21 (US)—Mr James J. Johnston, the old boy bandit, who is promoting the Sharkey-Walker fight at Ebbets Field tomorrow night for the benefit of the Free Milk Fund for Babies, Inc., now estimates the probable gate at up around $250,000.

Capacity of Ebbets Field is somewhere around 52,000 with seats placed on the diamond, and the old boy bandit's estimate is based on a crowd of about 25,000. Under the scale of prices fixed for this event, to $15, including the State tax, it will be a pretty good [illegible] the new law for a Milk Fund ball game.

The Sharkey-Walker fight is the most talked-of event of the kind in years, and in normal times would have drawn $500,000. But the fistic clients haven't got that kind of money now.

Spectacular Battle Is Predicted

As for the fight itself, I am inclined to the belief that this is going to be one of the most spectacular battles in years as long as it lasts.

With Mickey Walker in the best condition of his career, and thoroughly confident, I must give him an excellent chance to beat Sharkey. I believe the fight will end in a knockout one way or the other well inside of ten rounds.

Sharkey is quoted as saying that he is going along with Walker for about ten rounds, and then flatten him.

"I need the work," Sharkey says, according to the correspondents in his camp at Pompton Lakes.

If Sharkey says that, he is talking through his sailor hat. He will knock Walker out in one heat, if he can. Sharkey is not foolish enough to take undue chances with a ring desperado like Walker, especially the latter is rather a slow beginner, anyway, and gets better as he goes along.

It goes without saying that Walker will flatten Sharkey in one second, if possible. Walker is looking for any work. He is after that

STASIAK WILL MEET McGILL

The manner in which promoter Paul Bowser has started on the supporting bouts to his championship encounter between Henri DeGlane undisputed title holder, and Gus Sonnenberg, at Braves Field on July 30, indicates that the greatest evening's wrestling entertainment in history will be provided.

Under the title match, Bowser has signed Ed Don George, who lost his chance for a return to the championship by an eyelash, to meet Nick Lutza, the Southern California flash.

The veteran promoter has also signed Stanley Stasiak, the Polish Lion, to tackle the rough and ready Pat McGill, in the main preliminary bout.

The report that DeGlane plans to go back to France if he beats the "Dynamiter" has roused the anger of the latter, who declares that he will leave no stone unturned to topple the Frenchman off the high pedestal he once occupied himself.

SHORT ARM SCISSORS

DYNAMITE GUS SONNENBERG, who meets Henri DeGlane, world's champion, in The Grapple of the Century, in aid of the Christmas Basket and Allied Funds of the Boston Evening American at Braves Field, one week from next Thursday night, today shows you how to use the Short Arm Scissors. In wrestling one kind of a hold leads to another until the pinning grip is secured. In our previous lessons I have explained the rudimentary holds, those used to get an opponent in a position where his shoulders may be pinned to the mat.

OFFER $50,000 FOR SHIRES

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—The Chicago Tribune said today that William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the Chicago Cubs is preparing to bid in one or more players of Coach Arthur "Dee" Shires, first baseman of the Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association.

Shires was traded to Washington early last season and was in turn sold to Milwaukee for $10,000 last winter.

The Milwaukee club hopes to receive at least $75,000 for Shires, the Tribune said. Not only is the Cub owner anxious to obtain him, the newspaper continued, but the Cleveland Indians, Pittsburgh Pirates and Boston Braves are ready to place bids.

Wrigley's bidding depends, the Tribune said largely upon the report of a Cub scout who is now trailing the first baseman.

Yale Okun's Wife Feared for Jack Sharkey's Life

Pompton Lakes, N. J., July 21—Training camps draw out unusual visitors. For instance, Yale Okun's pretty wife sat at the Sharkey camp ringside viewing her lord and master for the first time in ring costume.

Nobody ever saw anyone so near death from sheer fright. But wasn't she just like a wife?

Asked why she was agitated she said with all the combined babyfaces in the world:

"Mr. Ives, I was so afraid that Yale would KILL Mr. Sharkey. Wouldn't that have been TERRIBLE."

You can ask Mrs. Hearst, Bill Farnsworth and Damon Runyon if it wouldn't.

MRS. HELEN MOODY ADVANCES TO 4th ROUND

MISS PALFREY DEFEATS MRS. B. H. COLE

Manchester-by-the-Sea, July 21—Swinging onward, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, "Queen of Tennadom," today shot into the fourth round of the Essex County Club's annual women's singles tournament.

"Helen the Great" disposed of Mrs. Ary Lamme of Rye, N. Y. in the third round, by a score of 6–3, 6–2.

The Californian lost one game in the first and third sets, and three in the second set, the latter chiefly by faults. Mrs. Moody doubt-faulted twice in the second set.

Meanwhile other "favorites" were advancing through the fourth round and Miss Sarah Palfrey, of the famous Brookline sisters, closed up the third round by defeating Mrs. R. H. Cole, 2d, of North Andover, 6–2, 6–2.

Miss Morrill Has Trouble Winning

Miss Marjorie Morrill, of Dedham, the defending titlist, had a "marathon" in the fourth round in playing Miss Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., the year's winner of the Longwood women's invitation singles. The score was 6–4, 13–11. Exactly 2 hours and 26 minutes was taken for the second set.

Mrs L. A. Harper, Santa Barbara, Calif., seeded No. 2 in the tournament, came through the fourth round by defeating Mrs. J. Dallas Corbiere, of Southboro, 6–3, 6–2.

Another fourth round victor was Miss Mary Greef, of Kansas City, who won over Miss Cecilia Riegel, of Philadelphia, 6–3, 6–4.

The fourth "round" was the stumbling block for Baroness Levi, of New York, only foreign seeded player in the tournament. She succumbed to the brilliant play of Miss Josephine Cruickshank, of Santa Ana, Cal., 6–2, 2–6, 6–3.

Miss Dorothy Weisel, of Sacramento, Cal., seeded fourth, advanced to the quarter-finals at the expense of Miss Edith Sigourney, of Brookline. The score was 6–2, 2–6, 6–2.

Play was resumed in the women's doubles, and in the second round Miss Ruby Bishop of Pasadena, Cal., teamed with Miss Dorance Chase of Brookline, defeated Miss Katherine Borden of Winchester and Miss Edwina Campbell of Bryn Mawr, Pa., 6–4, 6–3.

THE BROADWAY BOY WHO MEETS GARRULOUS GOB

Broadway, the White Lights, the Human Moths, the Butterflies, night club habitues, show people from Coast to Coast will go in mourning should Micky Walker be beaten by Jack Sharkey tomorrow night. Smiling Micky is Broadway's favorite—the Broadway Boy. Smiling Micky's home is the Bright Lights, Sharkey's the happy fireside with wife and children always in call. Here you see SMILING MICKY WALKER in his natural elements, under the bright lights and under the ring lights. Above, SMILING MICKY is doing the Bunny Hug—or is it the Bulldog Clutch—with a fair show girl.

SMILING MICKY is shown above doing the Charleston as RAY NEWMAN strums the ukulele. One thing about Micky, he forgets to tango when the gong clangs. Micky does his tango-ing outside the ring. But, at that, it looks as if Micky would have to dance to Jack Sharkey's tune.

EJECT KID LEE FROM CAMP

victory I believe that that first round Wednesday night will be a winner

Geo. "Kid" Lee Ejected From Walker's Camp

By BILL CORUM

Grangeburg, N. Y., July 21—With the tedious training grind over, Mickey Walker smiled a victory smile this morning at the breakfast table. The Jersey's strong boy is in magnificent shape for tomorrow night's scheduled 15-round go against Jack Sharkey at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn.

"Gosh, I'm glad that's over with," Walker said in a quiet tone of voice when he returned from the roads where he completed three miles of fast running.

Walker got a haircut and a shave yesterday afternoon. He looked like a movie sheik when he climbed through the ropes to engage in "fun" work for a few hours late.

While he was pummeling the small bag a scene took place that helped to enliven things around the camp for a few minutes. Hayes spotted a spy, who had been sent over from Brighton Lakes, N. J., to give Mickey the careful once-over and report his findings to Sharkey.

The spy on the secret mission happened to be George Lee, a middleweight of a few years back, who used to fight for Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's pilot. He was ejected from the grounds.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

If your back swing is all arm and wrists, becoming nothing more than a free swinging at the ball you will discover that you have a good deal of lack of contact with the ground. Your shots will never be good unless you have a very solid footing against the ground, especially on your right foot. In your address, settle back with the weight of your body on your heels. Don't lean backwards, but let the weight of your body settle idly on your heels. Then, as the arms, wrists and club move again together in the slang back, let your body turn to follow the club—and follow it all the way in the sense of turning with it as required not with the feeling of rushing or hurrying it. Of course there is the drag-back principle, in which the hands go ahead of the club starting back.

Scott Martyr to Science

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Phil Scott, British boxer, and inventor of the prone method of fighting, has retired from the ring and has surrendered his title.

Phil claims that the Einstein theory has him so bewildered and befuddled that he does not know whether he is standing up or lying down.

As long as Phil knew his position was due north and south, everything was O. K. He knew no opponent could ever floor him. He was already there.

Canvas makers, who supplied the ring covering, have asked Phil to reconsider. Phil kept them busy by wearing out ring floors.

Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

As the four ball teams have not been in action for a couple of weeks, the Tedesco Country Club invitation will benefit. The Tedesco Country Club is staging a two-day 36-hole four ball best ball handicap medal play tournament tomorrow and Thursday.

Judge Ralph Reeve chairman of the tournament committee, expects the largest field in years. A year ago the Tedesco invitation was interrupted by thunder storms and heavy rains, which caused its postponement. If the weather man will hold off the rain for a couple of days, there is every reason for predicting a large field this week.

Although a member of the Country Club, Miss Rosamond Vahey, the state champion, is playing for Pocasset. Miss Vahey was to have been a member of Oyster Harbors, but she accepted a bid from Pocasset and would not go back on her word.

About 30 local golfers will play in the Canadian open Amateur championship next month at the Royal Montreal Country Club. Among those who will go up to lift the Canadian title are Fred Wright, state champion, Francis Quinnet, Jesse Guilford, Perley Chase, Charlie Eaton, Jack Beasley, Jack Eaton, Brice Evans, Jim Beasley and a real dark horse, Fredrick J. Corcoran.

On Saturday, August 8, Francis Ouimet will team up with Art Bossi, against Jesse Guilford and Perley Chase for an exhibition match at Wakanaka, one of the finest layouts in the Montreal district.

Jack Healey will give the Canadian golf enthusiasts something to talk about when he starts cutting the smaller and heavier balls during the Canadian open amateur championship.

Dr Dan Kiley, chairman of the tournament committee, is leaving no stone unturned to make the 1931 Highland Country Club open the stellar one of all times. Fred Wright, Jesse Guilford, Emery Stratton and Billy McPhail will play in a foursome on Sunday and there will be many other low handicap players from this state and Rhode Island.

Malden A. L. Mat Show on Tonight

Malden Post, A. L., has completed its card for the all-star wrestling show to be staged tonight on the Malden high school field, Pearl st., Malden at 8 p. m.

Beside the feature event between Nick Lutze and John Spellman, there will be other bouts to a finish, between Pat McGill and Bibber McCoy, Leo Masaliuos vs. Eddie Eisner and Jack Nichols vs. Ted Germain.

MISS ROBINSON MAY RUN AGAIN

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—Betty Robinson, Olympic sprint queen whose career was believed terminated by an airplane crash, may run again.

Harry Robinson, father of the speedy little Riverdale girl, said today physicians predicted his daughter's leg would mend to the same length of the other and that she would be able to compete again within a year.

SHARKEY HAS 30 LBS. ON WALKER

By JACK CONWAY

Sharkey looked over at Buckley and grinned.

"He knew I cut the round," said Johnny. "I only let the round go 2 minutes 10 seconds. Sharkey hasn't got a mark or bruise on him after four weeks of strenuous training, why take a chance with fate only 50 seconds of a training bout to go? Jack was going to let fly a right hand smash, and he might have hurt his hand if the blow had been high."

Sharkey had previously boxed a round each with Joe Banovic, Yale Okun and Paul Cavelier. He did six rounds on the light bag and at skipping rope.

"What about the fight?" I asked Sharkey back in his dressing room.

Sharkey Glad Grind Is Over

"I'm glad the old training grind is over," he replied. "I'll rest up from now until I enter the ring with Walker at Ebbetts Field on Wednesday night. I'll try to store up as much nervous energy as possible. I'll release it all behind my punches when I face Mickey. I'm going to knock the Toy Bull Dog out. Maybe not in the first part of the bout, but somewhere before the 15th round has been reached.

"Then they can bring on Schmeling or Carnera. I'll be ready for them."

I find that Sharkey's confidence has increased as he has rounded into condition. He is in as good shape as when he battled Schmeling a year ago last June and cannot see how a small fellow like Walker can lick him.

Sharkey Will Weigh Around 197 Lbs.

Sharkey weighed 197 pounds following his final training session. I look for him to be around 1 this notch when he scales in tomorrow afternoon. He will have between 25 and 30 pounds in weight on Walker. This is a big weight advantage.

Sharkey stated today he would remain here until tomorrow, when he will break camp and motor to New York. He will remain at an uptown hotel until after the weighing-in ceremonies.

Walker has also completed the strenuous end of his training. Mickey has been at Greenebrig for five weeks and has worked harder to get in condition than he has for any previous bout.

He knows that the Sharkey match presents him with his golden opportunity. If he is able to get past Sharkey, it will be impossible to deny the toy bull dog a meeting with Schmeling.

I find that New York, Jersey and Connecticut are going to send thousands of fans to Ebbetts Field.

Tommy Farle, who has charge of the Milk Fund's Boston office at Room 222, No. 27 School st., reports that there will be a large delegation of Hub fans at the ringside. Farle will shift his office

No Broadcast of Sharkey-Walker Go

New York, July 21 (INS)—The bout between Jack Sharkey and Mickey Walker in Brooklyn tomorrow night will not be broadcast from ring, according to announcement today. The promoters refused several offers for the radio rights, including one bid of $20,000.

ROEBUCK AND SZABO TILT AT GARDEN

By RINGSIDE

Tiny Roebuck, big injun from the Haskell Indian school will have another chance tonight to show his wares at the Boston Garden. Roebuck meets Sandor Szabo, Hungarian butcher boy, in the feature wrestling tussle, one fall to a finish.

Szabo lost two recent verdicts to Karl Pojello and Jim McMillan. At the time Szabo was knocking at the door of Jim London, he thought sure he had a chance to meet the Greek. A win tonight should help him out.

The special attraction between Taro (the Terror) Miyake, Japanese, and for 20 years the world's jiu jitsu champion, and Jim McMillen, ex-Illinois star, promises to be interesting as well as thrilling.

LOCALS CAN OVERTAKE BROWNS

By JOE CASHMAN

Starting tomorrow, the Red Sox will play eleven games in eight days with the Chicago, White Sox and Detroit Tigers, the two clubs beneath the natives in the standing.

There will be a doubleheader with the Chisox on the morrow and single games daily for the rest of the week. The Tigers will play a twin-bill at Braves Field next Sunday and another at Fenway Park on the following Wednesday with two single contests in between.

This stretch of games will offer the Colinsmen a golden opportunity to get a strangle hold on sixth place and possibly overtake the fifth-place St. Louis Browns, who will be tackling the Athletics and Senators.

At the moment the Sox have a one-game lead over both Chicago and Detroit. If they can gain in each of the coming series, they should have an advantage of at least five games over both these rivals when the second Western invasion closes a week from tomorrow.

To date the local club has split seven in six games with the White Sox and taken three out of five from the Tigers, and judging from its showing against the Indians in the current series at the Fens, it stands a fine chance of taking the majority of games from its next two opponents, unless those two Western entries have improved greatly since they last appeared in this neck of the woods.

Sox Must Fight to Stay Out of Cellar

Should the Sox fail, however, they are likely to stay back in the basement and stay there a while for following the Tigers, the New York Yanks will come to town for seven games.

So it can be safely said that the Fenway flock will play no more crucial games this season than they will in the next week.

After taking two in a row from the Indians, the natives got a lot of bad baseball out of their system while losing the third tilt, 9 to 2, after getting away to a two-run lead in the first inning and staying in front until the sixth.

CLAN-BEACONS CLASH AGAIN

A repetition of last Sunday's battle is booked for when the Clan McGregor and Beacons soccer elevens meet to decide the championship of the Boston and District league in a play off contest at Franklin Field next Sunday.

The clan won the Mayor Curley cup on Sunday, coming from behind with but fifteen minutes to play to win the trophy.

Title Game Tonight in Dorchester Loop

The first-half pennant in the Dorchester Twilight League may be settled tonight when Forest Hills and Presentations clash at Healy playground.

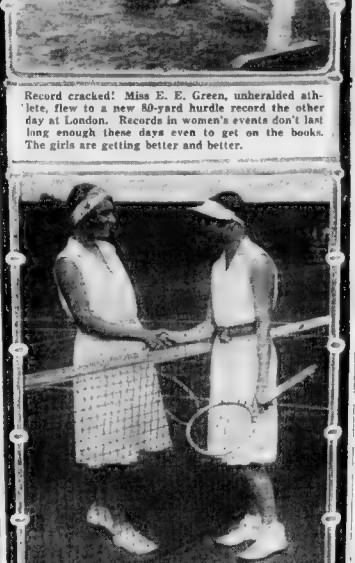
If Presentations can beat Forest Hills it will mean a three-way tie between Forest Hills, St. Marks and St. Thomas. If Forest Hills wins they will carry off the first-half honors.

A second-half game will find St Alphonsus and the Agawams meeting at Fens Stadium.

SPORTS REEL

DAILY SHOTS FROM EVERYWHERE

Record cracked! Miss E. E. Green, unheralded athlete, flew to a new 80-yard hurdle record the other day at London. Records in women's events don't last long enough these days even to get on the books. The girls are getting better and better.



Rebels against the "Queen." MARJORIE MORRILL, Dedham, and MARY GREEF, Kansas City, two players in the Essex County tennis tourney who are probable opponents of Helen Wills Moody who is trying to regain her throne.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

What's a six-run handicap to the Boston Athletics? Less than nothing. The White Sox landed on two Mackian twirlers for six runs in the first inning yesterday, only to have the champs come back and tie it up in the second and then go on to win easily.

The second-place Senators kept pace with the champions by whipping the Tigers for the fourth time in a row, which leaves them still seven games back of the top.

William Watson Clarke, classy Brooklyn southpaw, held the Cubs to three hits, but two of these were bunched for a run, and that was enough to give the Hornsbymen a 1 to 0 victory and increase the lead of the St. Louis Cardinals, who were idle, to six full games.

Bill Dineen, who is umpiring in the Sox-Indian series, has been calling 'em for 20 years and says he is good for 20 years more despite the claims of Natick Tommy Connolly, who recently retired from active service to become chief of the arbiters, that he, Dineen, was a big league mound ace when he Connolly, was breaking in as an umpire.

The failure of the Indians to bring Pitcher Hudlin home with the winning run after he had tripled with one gone in the 12th inning of Sunday's game on royal Manager Roger Peckinpaugh, that he rumored he made a ruin that hereafter any of his players who fail to score a runner from third with only one out must contribute $2 to a fund which will be used for something or other when the season is finished.

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press

Roy Mahaffey, Athletics—Went in as relief pitcher, held White Sox to four hits and one run in eight innings, as A's won, 13—7.

Ed Wells, Yankees—Pitched Yanks to victory over Browns and drove in two runs with double and single.

Carnera Fights Tonight

Rochester, N. Y., July 21—The 10-round fight between Primo Carnera and Knute Hansen, scheduled for last night, was postponed until tonight on account of rain.

ARCELLI AND WHITE WIN VERDICTS

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Werther Arcelli defeated Leslie Baker and Darcy White won the duke over Baby Jack Renault in the feature 10-rounders at the Argonne A. A. show at Braves Field last night.

Although Arcelli had such a rousing lead at the final gong that there was no question about the outcome, Referee Jimmy Walsh, who appeared not to have examined the ballots of the judges with unseeing accuracy, lifted Baker's arm indicating that the Watertown boy had won.

The choice of boos made Jimmy wonder and on re-reading the ballots, discovered his mistake, and then announced that Arcelli was the winner.

White Evens Matters With Jack Renault

In the first of the 10-round bouts Darcy White of New Bedford evened scores with Baby Jack Renault of Cambridge when he received the votes of the officials after 10 torrid rounds.

Flaherty Wins "Pro" Debut

Mickey Hanley of Stoughton scored his second consecutive victory over Haywood Storey, colored flyweight of Chicago, when he outslugged the Windy City comedian in four lively sessions.

Willie Bush of Waterbury scored a technical knockout over Rocky Knight, who was billed as a native of Germany. Knight substituted for Hale Brown of Louisiana, who failed to put in a appearance at either the State House or at Braves Field.

BIG SHAKE-UP BY HORNSBY

Chicago, July 21 (US)—The sale of Fred (Sheriff) Blake to the Phillies for the waiver price, the benching of Hack Wilson for the third time this season the installation of Vincent Barton in right field, the switching of Kiki Cuyler to center, where he was one of the greatest players of the game, and the moving of Danny Taylor to left constituted a few of the managerial duties of Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cubs yesterday.

Wilson hasn't been hitting at anything near his old clip and the Rajah decided that another rest, this third and vacation of the season, might help him as well as provide young Barton with an opportunity to make his first major league start.

Blake has been with the Cubs for seven years. He has come close to achieve a single victory this season.

Hornsby, Schalk and O'Doul Fined $50

New York, July 21 (AP)—Maybe it's the heat or the torrid scramble for advantageous positions in the standings but the battle between the umpires and the players in the major leagues gets hotter and hotter.

Within the last three days, two managers, two coaches and four players either have been suspended fined or chased out of the ball park for the duration of the game.

Yesterday John Arnold Heydler, president of the National League, announced that Manager Rogers Hornsby and Coach Ray Schalk of the Chicago Cubs and Frank O'Doul of the Brooklyn Robins had been fined $50 each for their disagreement with the umpires in Saturday's game.

In the American League, Umpire Owens had his troubles with the Browns and the Yankees Sunday yesterday. Before an argument over whether a ball was fair or foul had ended, Owens ordered Ralph Kress to the showers and then chased Jim Levy and Sam Gray, who had continued the argument from the bench.

French Lacking Funds to Send Team to Olympics

Paris, July 21 (AP)—The executive committee of the French Olympic Association decided today that insufficient funds were available to permit sending a French team to the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles.

This decision, however, is subject to the action of the association as a whole. A general meeting is scheduled this Thursday for consideration of the problems of raising additional funds.

First of the Daily Visual Broadcasts Being Aired Tonight

While it isn't calculated that general reception will be the result, honest-to-goodness television gets under way tonight at 10:15 o'clock as a daily feature of WABC and W2XAB, both units of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Operating under an experimental license granted by the Federal Radio Commission, the latter station enters into a schedule of daily transmission, including sight as well as sound. Much ceremony will attend the opening festivities, with no less a personage than Mayor James J. Walker of New York acting as master of ceremonies. "Jimmy" is natively adapted to the role for he not only possesses a glib and ready tongue, but also presents an appearance not at all hard to look upon. No doubt television appeals to him strongly.

As stated, few listeners will see what goes on because few have equipment with which to receive the sight program, which is too bad. There is husky-toney talent on the program. Ed Wynn, otherwise known as the perfect fool; Henry Burbig, Lou Alley, Kate Smith, Helen Gilligan and Milton Watson are among those to be televised.

Response from the outside world will be eagerly awaited by CBS officials following the effort. It is safe to assert that a letter or telegram will come from every fan whose equipment makes it possible to pull in the offering. If there is successful reception in these parts this department would like to hear about it in detail. Tonight's television doings would seem to indicate the passing of another milestone along radio's path of progress. In fact, a great deal depends on how things go tonight.

Don't Tell Anybody, But . . . .

Very strong rumor is abroad concerning Ted Husing. Tedd, you know, is the mainstay of CBS where and when public events are concerned. Whisperings tell of his contract expiring August 1. Furthermore, he has been seen in the company of men who make things go for NBC. Aha, the plot thickens. This is no prediction, but don't be surprised.

* * *

John McCormack, heard last night through WBZ, sang for NBC, even though he signed a four-year contract with CBS yesterday. His future appearances, on the stage as well as by radio, will be governed by the Columbia Concerts Bureau.

* * *

When Kate Smith sang "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight" during one of her broadcasts a week or so ago, a wayward girl was touched. Kate intended to locate a young man, for his aged mother, but instead it was a prodigal daughter who responded and returned to the Brooklyn home she deserted eight weeks ago. A mother's blessing by mail is Kate's prized reward. This is great stuff, even if it does sound like publicity blah. The sweet CBS singer loves to carry her messages beyond the ears, getting down under our jackets on the left. Everybody has a heart, even though lots of people think admitting it is slushy. What fools some mortals be.

* * *

Now comes what certainly sounds like the outstanding slip to pass in the "mike" this month. A very prominent announcer was giving a few of those much talked-of sidelights in a studio. Describing the setting for an equally well-known artist, the painfully dignified narrator remarked: "Here on the piano is a beautifully framed photo of Mrs. Soandso (artist's wife) and her two charming children, the gift of an old family friend." A severe bawling out followed, they say.

* * *

Dealer's Dirge: "My husband told me not to pay another cent on this radio unless you make it run right; so there!" Sound of door slamming. N. P. T.

On the Air

President Hoover will speak on the air for the Y. M. C. A. convention at Cleveland, Aug. 8 . . . It didn't take Linus Travers and the "Met" long to get George Bancroft before a mike. He is heard at 8 tonight on WAAB . . .

Rumors, the readers' rage, are flying thick and fast in radio circles. The most surreptitious are thus that Ted Husing's CBS contract expires Aug. 1, and the announcer may go with NBC . . . that Phil Cook may retire . . . that Bob (Meet the Artist) Taplinger and Ginger Rogers are going steady . . . that Jessica Dragonette, who vacations Aug. 7 with Vaughn De Leath subbing for her on the air, will come back with a hubby.

"Mississippi Moon," Miller and Lyles' theme song for their CBS broadcasts, is written by a millionaire sportsman . . . The Yiddish lament, "Eli, Eli," will be sung by Georgette Harvey of the Eno Boys, negro singers, over WNAC at 8:23 this eve . . . Harold Van Ambergh, leader of Roxy's Gang tenor, is now touting a saxaphone for R. A. Rolfe . . . Harry Horlick has renewed his Gypsies contract, thereby squelching all rumors . . . WAAB is experimenting with a gadget that produces howls and squeals . . . Jacques (the portly one) Renard does things in a big way. He not only purchased a pent house but bought a L. I. cottage as well . . . Ann Leaf, who never spoke into a mike until last week, sounded so good she may announce her own 12:30 A. m. organ program. Which would make the sleepy announcer angry . . . Don Bell will soon be heard as a ukulele strummer. M. G. M.

Personalities

REYNOLDS EVANS, the villain of Scott's 'Airabesque,' is the only radio artist who seriously decorates himself with a monocle . . . On the present All Star Revue GEORGE JESSEL, master of ceremonies wore a straw hat all through the program so that he wouldn't get too close to the mike a bad habit of his. Whenever he got too close the rim of his hat bumped into the mike and George promptly pulled back. Cute? . . . OLGA ALBANI has a son five yrs old . . . DALE WIMBROW leaves the N. Y. CBS studios to do a year's work on the Dixie network . . . CARVETH WELLS, NBC adventure talker fetches an elephant beside his name whenever he signs it, and if he starts answering fan mail, he'll better get a rubber stamp of the pachyderm . . . Between numbers on her air engagements MARY McCOY figures out cross-word puzzles . . . Matrimony has depleted the ranks of FRANK WINEGARD'S orch. His boys, incidentally, wear overalls as a part of their makeup . . . CAPT. FRANK HAWKS will soon do a lecture tour under NBC auspices which probably will include several broadcasts . . . When TED HUSING landed in Boston the other day to report the Longwood tennis matches he found he had neglected to bring along his "special mike." And poor Ted had to refer to N. Y. to have it sent by plane.

Everett School Fight Up to Court

Claiming that it is "imprudent and not in the public interest, Ernest L. Wood and nine other taxpayers of Everett have filed a petition with the Supreme Court at East Cambridge asking that Mayor O'Neill, members of the schoolhouse building commission and Anthony J. Bond, a contractor, be restrained from proceeding with a contract for the erection of a $418,000 addition to the Parlin Junior high school, Everett.

BANKING FOUND IN A HEALTHY CONDITION

By FRANK H. MELOON

That state banks have 53 per cent more deposits than national banks is one of the surprising features of a report submitted to the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks by R. N. Sims, secretary-treasurer of the association. Mr Sims says:

"The figures are very gratifying and reflect, as a whole, a healthy condition of the banking institutions of our country.

"On March 25, 1931, there was a total of 22,800 banks, of which 13,865 were State banks and 8935 national banks, and in round numbers a total capital, surplus and undivided profits of $9,737,-802,736, total deposits of $56,610,-716,658, and total resources of $70,-814,887,579.

An increasingly large number of of investment banking houses have lately been recommending the purchase at current levels of selected bank stocks. Usually in the past rising prices for insurance and bank stocks have been preliminary to the appearance of a bull market in listed stocks.

John H. Bartlett

* * *

In his latest book, former Governor John H. Bartlett of New Hampshire, ex-first assistant postmaster-general and now of the International joint commission of the United States and Canada, tells us Smith is a grand old Yankee name. Of course that is true. But it is also true that Smith is a name found elsewhere.

* * *

Here are a few examples of the Smith family abroad: Germany, Schmidt; Holland, Schmiths; Spain, Smithas; France, Lefevre; Ireland, Gowen; Scotland, Gowans; China, Schimmit; Italy, Fabbroni; Ukraine, Snitkin; Greece, Skmiton; Russia, Skmittowski, and Poland, Schmittiweiski.

* * *

The Smiths are mighty in business and finance as well as in the arts and professions. The Latin "Smith" was Vulcanus, after whom all the volcanoes in the world are named, because of their resemblance to forges. The greatest explosion in history, a State st. authority tells us, was that of the volcano Krakatoa in 1883.

* * *

The common trade of the smiths has been declining ever since the automobile began to drive out old Dobbin. Blacksmith shops are a rarity. At Paris, Me, we find a big one still thrives, and saw summer tourists gazing at it with curiosity.

* * *

Scores of State st. traders carry rolls of $100 and even $500 bills, used to effect quick settlements where even certified checks would not take their place. If they followed the example of English commercial firms handling 20-pound bill, which correspond to our $100 ones, they might get into trouble. Writing one's name on a U. S. bank note is a punishable offence. In England, however, such "large notes are frequently endorsed when passed.

* * *

* * *

"All you can eat for 60 cts." is the new slogan of one country-wide restaurant chain. Scollay Square and other Boston locations about a quarter of a century ago used to serve all you could eat for 25 cts., though they didn't advertise it that way. About the same time, a place on the great Boardwalk at Atlantic City won national notice by giving one all the root beer one could drink for a nickel. Some people would drink four or five good-sized glasses, but most contented themselves with one. Real beer gardens then were nearby rivals.

* * *

An analytical survey of American Tobacco common stock discloses that whereas dividends paid by the company over the past five years have consumed about 75 per cent of net earnings, the present rate of $5 regular plus $1 extra calls for only 60 per cent of estimated 1931 earnings.

Therefore it is held that a $7 basis is readily conceivable in the relatively near future, while even an $8 rate could probably be supported without difficulty.

Island Creek Coal Net Totals $803,292

Island Creek Coal Co. reports for six months ended June 30 net profits after all charges of $803,292, equal after preferred dividends to $1.21 per share on the 594,005 shares of common stock which compares with $1,119,802, equal after preferred dividends to $1.73 per share of common in the half of 1930, and with $1,487,652 or $2.33 per share of common in first half of 1929.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Dullness was again the outstanding characteristic of trading in Wall St today. The firm tone prevailing most of the season showed absence of bearish pressure, but it was evident that bullish pools were not disposed to try to run up their favorites in the face of continued uncertainty regarding settlement of problems overseas.

Favorites Advance to Highs on Move

It did not take much time today to see recorded another advance of a point or so in United States Steel, American Can, Stone & Webster and Paramount, which carried prices to the best levels since last Friday and from two to four points above last week's lowest level.

Oils Are Assisted by Drop in Output

The rails, utilities and oils attempted to join the upward procession in the second hour today, but had to be content with fractional gains. A drop of 108,000 barrels daily in crude oil output was good news for the bulls in the oils.

Congoleum Gets Some Good Buying

Congoleum-Nairn Co. Inc., and subsidiaries report for six months ended June 30, 1931, net income of $607,842, eequivaleent after dividend requirements on 7 per cent preferred stock, to 42 cents a share on common shares held in treasury. This compares with 40 cents a share on common stock, first six months of 1930.

Int. Shoe Up on Trade Betterment

Some Buying of Sugar Securities

Some in the sugar trade believe the long downward turn in the industry has passed and that slow improvement will be shown. Buying of sugar securities has been going on in a mild fashion, with South Porto Rico the feature which stock at present price of 14 has doubled in value from the low of the year.

American Woolen and Clothing Business

In the depressed times of the last 20 months it was natural that buying of clothes especially by men, dropped tremendously. Like shoes, clothing can only last a limited time and must be replaced. Shoes are being replaced after a long period of dullness, and now signs of replacement of clothing for men are apparently reflected by active resumption of factories making such clothes. Probably 95 per cent of the clothing worn by men in this country is made partly of wool and in these hard times domestic cloths will in many cases take the place of foreign materials on account of prices.

Not All Pool Work In Int. Telephone

Not all of the buying of International Telephone & Telegraph in the last couple of months can be ascribed to pool work. There has been a lot of replacement by those who sold the stock higher up and by others who consider the company has seen the worst. Certainly the company has purged itself of all unnecessary expenses and is operating on an economical basis today, which would have seemed impossible a couple of years ago. If business does not get any worse the dividend will be maintained even if it is not quite earned in 1931. It is obvious that the management would not cut the dividend until forced to, for it is the policy to finance every now and again with stock, giving rights rather than increasing the cash rate.

Tobacco Shares Still Popular

Tobacco shares are among those most popular with the bulls these days and most of the stocks are not far from the highs of the year. One commentator points out that there is a chance for a higher basis of dividends for American Tobacco. Dividends paid by the company over the past five years have consumed about 75 per cent of net, while the present rate of $5 regular, plus $1 extra, calls for only 60 per cent of estimated 1931 earnings. Some are looking for earnings of better than $10 a share. Company's last report showed $145,000,000 net working capital, of which $24,000,-000 was cash.

Baltimore & Ohio Plans Analyzed

Competent students of railroad affairs place in utmost importance the receptiveness which the I. C. C. has displayed toward Baltimore & Ohio's expansion program. Approval just given the road for acquisition of the Chicago & Alton marks the third of six similar requests granted the B. & O. within the last few years. The others were the Buffalo, Poughkeepsie & Pittsburgh and the Rochester & Susquehanna.

Seeking Control of Jersey Central

The Baltimore also has before the commission a plan for obtaining control of the Jersey Central Reading and Western Maryland. Observers see behind this expansion the likelihood that the B & O will eventually have the shortest route from New York to Chicago, passing through the most important eastern industrial centers. This would place it in a position among the first major carriers of the country to benefit from a general business revival.

Rail Statistics Not Encouraging

Statistical staff of a prominent Stock Exchange firm has figured per share railroad earning ratios for 1931, based on four months estimates given in recent testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission freight rate hearings, as follows: Nothing for common shares of the Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Illinois Central, Pere Marquette, Cotton Belt, Frisco, Southern Railway, Wabash, Katy, Nickel Plate and Northern Pacific.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS OF MARKET

State St. is depressed because of the tiresome repetition of the same thing day after day. Foreign developments are still in control of the market and there seems to be nothing to do but wait and see what the final outcome will be. A survey of the domestic situation promises little, as there does not seem to be anything sufficiently strong to usurp the spotlight.

* * *

Irregular strength in the oil group, both on the curb and the big board, has lent credence to the stories the financial district has heard recently indicating producers are making some progress with their program to restrict drilling operations.

* * *

If oil men are successful, their efforts might gain enough recognition to wrest attention away from outside news. At the moment, however, the extra session of the Texas Legislature, called to attempt the solution of over-production in that state, is the only constructive step visible.

* * *

Without attempting to belittle the hide market as a barometer of better times, a Boston leather buyer points out a peculiarity of this mart. Hides bought now are not ready for cutters of sole and upper leather for six months, as it takes that long to tan them.

* * *

When this fact is put together with the additional fact that, in the next few weeks, buyers for the shoe factories enter the market as orders are received for fall merchandise, it is not impossible that hide dealers, who also sell cut soles and upper leather are withholding stock from the market in order to move their finished products at top prices.

AUTO SALES IN UPWARD TREND

Detroit, July 21. Hudson and Essex sales for the last weeks in June reflected an upward trend which was continued into July, when sales for the week ending July 4 showed a substantial increase over the previous week and a decided increase over the same period one year ago, according to Chester G. Abbott, merchandising director and a director of the company.

Mr Abbott says that in view of this increased demand production will show an increase, but due to the policy of the company in basing its production strictly on dealer requirements no monthly schedule is made.

So far as the labor situation is concerned Hudson will not shut down this month and any increased schedule will be taken care of by the forces now employed. Hudson's manufacturing facilities are arranged on such a flexible basis that it can meet varying demands from the dealers through an adjustment of its hours with present working forces.

Report of Packard for Half Year Out

Detroit, July 21—Preliminary figures of Packard Motor Car Co for second quarter indicate the company closed the first six months of 1931 with a minor loss. In the first half of 1930, Packard reported net profits of $5,528,837, or 36 cents a share on the 15,000,000 outstanding shares.

The loss in the current year was incurred principally because the company introduced its Continental series of new Packard eights on June 23 and most of the cost of developing and introducing the new cars went into the expenses of the first half of the year and was absorbed for that period. New cars are said to have been favorably received by the public.

B. M. T. Earnings for Year Increase

Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit System, including Brooklyn and Queens Transit System, reports for 12 months ended June 30 net income after all charges of $8,776,943. After Brooklyn & Queens Transit minority interests of $1,046,309, and after deducting preferred dividends of $1,496,808, the balance of $6,232,-096 is equal to $3.09 a share on the 768,911 common shares. This compares with net after minority interests and preferred dividends of $5,922,836 in the year to June 20, 1930, equal to $7.69 a common share.

Foreign Exchange Market Is Mixed

Great Britain demand: 4.84⅛, cables, 4.85; 60 day bills, 4.82⅜; France Demand, 3.82 5-16; cables, 3.92⅜; Italy demand, 5.22⅜; cables 5.22¼. Demands Belgium, 13.93; Germany 23.50.

McKeesport Tin's Profit $1,270,722

McKeesport Tin Plate Co. for the first half had net profit of $1,270,-722, equal to $4.23 a share on the common stock, compared with $1,-513,850, or $5.04 a share in the like period last year.

TONE IS FIRM IN BOSTON DEALINGS

German Credit Investment lowered fractionally to a new low for the year. Sullivan Machine lowered ⅛. Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred gained ⅛, while the prior preferred lowered a like amount.

Executive committee of New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. authorized the expenditure of $2,-608,363 for new construction and improvements in plant necessary to meet demand for service.

For Massachusetts the appropriations aggregate $2,124,151; for Rhode Island, $166,720; for Maine, $194,953; for New Hampshire, $83,-681; for Vermont, $39,457.

Clothing House Is on Full-Time Basis

Chicago, July 21—Hart, Schaffner and Marx are on a full-time manufacturing basis. Policy is to divide work so that practically the same number are steadily employed. There have been additions the past two weeks in the cutting department. This is the usual seasonal stepping up in manufacturing, but had been slightly postponed this season because of late opening of fall lines and delayed woolen deliveries.

Bar Silver Is Easy

CURB MARKET SEES QUIET ADVANCES

New York, January 21—The curb market continued to hold at an even keel in a moderately more active session today, with strength in individual stocks offsetting the scattered irregularity developing in isolated sections of the list.

Utilities displayed a uniformly firm tone with better than average progress noted in American Gas & Electric, which gained 1¼ points; American & Foreign Power warrants were up a point, and Electric Bond & Share up ⅞. Fractional gains were the rule in American Superpower, Associated Gas & Electric A, Middle West Utilities, United Gas and United Light & Power.

Gulf was in the vanguard of a further improvement in the oil section, swinging up the line for a gain of 1⅛ points. Standard of Indiana, Standard of Kentucky and Vacuum were other favorites to exceed their best levels of yesterday's drive.

Specialties were mixed, although advances were preponderant. Among the leaders were Aluminum up 2, Great Atlantic & Pacific Stores up 2, Newmont Mining up 2⅛, Crocker Wheeler up 1½ and MacMarr Stores up a point. Weakness cropped up in Gray Telephone Pay Station, which slumped 3⅞ points, and Mead-Johnson, which was 1⅛ lower.

HERSHEY HAS EARNINGS UP

New York, July 21 (AP)—The Hershey Chocolate Corp and affiliated companies today reported for the June quarter an increase in earnings over the like period of 1930.

Net income for the quarter this year amounted to $2,047,950, against $1,933,496 for the quarter in 1930. Net for the first half this year amounted to $4,718,680, compared with $4,253,714 in the first half of 1930.

U S Leather Co reported for the June quarter net loss of $318,284, compared with net profit of $19,350 in the like quarter of 1930.

General Railway Signal Co. for the June quarter had net earnings of $584,868, equal to $1.64 a share on the common stock, compared with $658,933, or $1.72 a share in the June quarter last year.

Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. reported for the quarter ended June 30 net profit of $26,826, compared with net loss of $68,766 in the corresponding period of 1930.

Nickel Plate Has Gain in Earnings

Cleveland, June 21—New York, Chicago & St. Louis reports for six months ended June 30 net of $1,-038,584 after charges, equivalent to $2.88 a share on 360,536 shares of 6 per cent preferred against $646,-314, or $1.79 a share on preferred, in first six months of 1930.

Net for the quarter ended June 30 was $528,288 after charges, equal to $1.46 a share on 360,536 shares of 6 per cent preferred, against $372,-763 or $1.03 a share on preferred in second quarter of 1930.

Republic Abandons Plan of Suspension

Youngstown O., July 21—Republic Steel Corp. is operating its tin plate mills in the Warren plant at 44 per cent this week. Although its schedule originally called for suspension of tin mill operations for the week, fairly heavy packers' demands are benefitting makers of plate for tinning, and the mill will be kept in operation.

Business Machines' Earnings Increased

International Business Machines Corp. reported first half net earnings of $3,778,492, equal to $5.84 a share, compared with $3,654,310, or $5.45 a share on the same share basis in the corresponding period of 1930. The figures include earnings of the company's foreign subsidiaries.

RAILS IN LEAD OF NEW WALL ST. ADVANCE

New York, July 21—Rails came the fore in a quiet and somewhat hesitant advance in the stock and bond markets today.

The dull and sold-out appearance of the share market prompted professional bulls to make a few experimental efforts, which were attended with a mild degree of success. Trading quickened a little, and the day's turnover exceeded a million shares.

FIRM AT CLOSING.

Wall st. was disinclined to try to place any definite interpretations on the developments at the London conference, and traders generally were intent merely on killing time pending further developments.

The stock market sagged for a time after a substantial upturn around midday, but strength of the rails gave the list a firm tone in the late trading, although final prices were moderately under the day's best.

Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio and New York Central closed about 1 to 2 points lower, and Aatchison and Rock Island were up about 4.

Allied Chemical lost about half of an extreme rise of 4. Miscellaneous issues closing a point or two higher included U. S. Steel, Beoxhem, American Can, Case and American Home Products. A few recent pool favorites seemed to encounter profit-taking.

Bulls naturally failed to attract any important following, with the London conference showing few signs of reaching an important turn, and next week's dividend announcements by the two leading steel makers hanging over the market.

Trading expanded substantially for a time over yesterday's five-year minimum, but the side lines remained the most popular section of the market. The list eased off slightly, and trading diminished after midday.

The market failed to make notable response to President Hoover's proposals to the London conference, which in brief, advocated maintenance of the present volume of foreign credit in Germany, and the selection of a committee, possibly by the bank for international settlements, to consider the further credit needs of Germany, including the conversion of some of the Reich's short term credits into long term obligations during coming months.

VIEWS IN WALL ST.

While these suggestions may have been disappointing to interests seeking the immediate extension of additional large credits to the Reich, they were substantially in accord with the views of some of Wall Street's leading bankers.

Proposals to pump another $500,000,000 or so of short term credit into Germany have not been popular in important Wall Street banking circles, although from a stock market point of view, any feasible program which would immediately ease the Central European situation would, of course, be greeted with enthusiasm.

The continued drain upon the Bank of England's gold stock emphasized the far-reaching unsettlement created by the German crisis. About $12,000,000 in metal was taken from the Bank of England today for shipment to the continent, largely to France, presumably, and it is felt that continued losses of around $10,000,000 daily may be expected while the present foreign exchange situation continues.

"Unless some new element is injected into the situation, an early increase in the Bank of England's discount rate seems unavoidable, although the bank's refusal to be stampeded into such action has been applauded here.

The second quarter earnings statements now appearing continue to include a few bright spots. Hershey Chocolate reported first half net of $5.43 per share, against $4.36 in the like period of last year. Brokerage wires carried forecasts of General Electric's first half statement, indicating that dividend requirements were nearly earned.

Call money in the New York market was a little firmer, with no concessions reported from the official rate of 1½ per cent.

Irregular Gains in Bond Market Seen

New York, July 21—Irregular gains and moderate activity characterized the bond market today. Trading in railroad and public utility issues was greater than in the industrial loans, but the trend in all three groups was plainly upward, although many of the gains were minor fractions. The upward movement was somewhat broader in the rails than in the utilities.

Steel Production Shows an Increase

Steel ingot production of the United States Steel Corporation for the week ended Monday is estimated at 33 per cent of theoretical capacity. This is an increase of about 2 per cent over the preceding week, when the rate was 31 per cent. Two weeks ago, before the Independence Day holiday, the corporation was at 33½ per cent of capacity.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, July 21—Cotton futures today closed 24 to 29 points lower. July, 9.23-24; October, 9.53-55; December, 9.76-77; January, 9.87-88; March, 10.05; May, 10.22. Spot quiet; middling, 9.40.

Wheat Closes Up in Chicago Dealings

Chicago, July 21—Wheat today closed unsettled ⅜-1⅛ cents higher, corn ⅛-⅜ advanced, oats ⅛-⅜ up and provisions varying from 32 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

FAVORS GIVING AWAY WHEAT

Enid, Okla., July 21 (AP)—Relief for the American wheat farmer and debt-burdened European nations by giving away the nation's 250,000,000 bushels of Farm Board stabilization wheat was proposed today by John Manley, manager of the Oklahoma Wheat Growers' Association and a member of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation Board.

"This plan would create better feeling, relieve American agriculture and start citizens of the nations eating wheat again," said Manley. "Some nations have got along so long without wheat they don't think they need it."

California Edison Income Shows Gain

Balance of earnings remaining for dividends and depdeciation after fixed charges of Southern California Edison Co., Ltd. for the half year ended June 30, 1931, showed an increase of $279,911, or 3 per cent over corresponding period of 1930, according to advices received from R. H. Ballard, president, by E. H. Rollins & Son.

London Trading Is Ruled by Dullness

London, July 21 (INS)—Stocks and bonds closed quietly on the London Stock Exchange today. Prices were slightly irregular and there was almost no business at all. Traders were keeping out of the market pending the outcome of the London conference.

Rails' Values Are Set at 27 Billions

Washington, July 21 (AP)—The bureau of valuation of the Interstat Commerce Commission today issued as an exhibit in the rate case studies of reproduction costs of the railroads of the country as of December 31, 1930, showing the cost of reproduction to be $27,189,657,479.

Kelly-Springfield Shipments Larger

W. H. Lalley, president of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co., said that July shipments to dealers are ahead of June. Shipments during June were 27.7 per cent ahead of May, and 4.6 per cent greater than June of last year.

KENNECOTT COPPER

C. G., Somerville—Shall I buy Kennecott now? I have $1500 to invest.

Ans.—Do not buy anything unless the purchase leaves you with an emergency reserve fund in the bank of $2000. That is small enough.

Kennecott Copper Corp. since acquisition of 98½ per cent interest in Utah Copper Co. completed in 1930 six years of operation. Last year was the poorest of the six. Net income of $15,585,737, or $1.66 a share was less than 30 per cent of the 1929 total of $52,066,365, or $5.55 a share, a record year. The 1930 earnings were reported before inventory and metal adjustments amounting to $7,626,825, a charge which was made directly to earned surplus. Had the charge been made against 1930 earnings, a practice followed by most industrial companies, the net income would have been reduced roughly 50 per cent from $15,585,737 to $7,958,912, or approximately 85 cents a share on the 9,393,150 shares.

Stockholders received $3 a share last year whereas earnings amounted to only $1.66. To some extent this deficiency between earnings and dividends accounts for the reduction in liquid assets from $46,728,208 at the end of 1929 to $25,632,216 in December 31, last. Kennecott's treasury position was considerably weakened as a result of the low estate of the copper industry in 1930. Working capital was reduced 40 per cent from $75,685,792 to below $40,000,000, bringing it down to the lowest point since Dec. 31, 1926.

The average price received from 1930 sales of copper was 11.854 cents per pound, lower than any yearly average since 1902. Ability to show any earning power in the face of these conditions is proof of the progress made in recent years toward improved metallurgy and lower operating costs.

The following picture of the Kennecott situation brings out clearly the trying conditions in the copper industry last year:

1930	$15,585,737	$1.66	346,115,719	11.854c	$25,632,216
1929	52,066,365	5.55	501,134,007	18.15	46,728,208
1928	45,651,833	5.02	520,098,107	15.	43,020,743
1927	28,127,934	3.12	470,715,831	13.389	18,291,069
1926	26,069,283	2.90	454,783,167	14.14	14,061,592

LOOKS DOUBTFUL

M. T., Boston—I should like to know the latest earnings for Raybestos-Manhattan. I have some of the stock much above present prices and wonder if the dividend is secure.

Ans.—For five months ended May 31, Raybestos-Manhattan reported earnings of 71 cents a share. No comparison is possible with corresponding period of preceding year. Net income last year declined to $1.71 a share, compared with $4.74 in 1929. Quarterly dividends of 65 cents a share have been maintained since initial distribution Dec. 15, 1929. A yield of 18 per cent at current levels makes the dividend look uncertain.

HOLDING PLAN STANDS TEST

In a booklet which they have compiled on the history, status, types and records of public utility holding companies, with particular reference to the preferred stocks, Dominick & Dominick say:

"The present depression has furnished a severe test of the ability of the utility holding companies to meet adverse conditions. In 1930, according to Standard Statistics, net earnings of 156 utility companies declined less than 1 per cent, while those of 1176 industrials fell 45 per cent and those of 76 railroads, 38 per cent.

"A standard compilation of the dividend records since organization of some 228 operating and holding companies, whose combined capitalization represents over 90 per cent of the total capitalization of the electric power and light industry in the United States, shows the following dividend record:

"Of the 205 companies having preferred stock outstanding, 192 have never deferred a preferred dividend payment; 12 companies have had dividend accumulations in the past which have been paid off in stock or cash (the last in 1924), and only one company is currently in arrears."

Transamerica Acts to Change Its Par

Wilmington, Del., July 21 (AP)—Stockholders of Transamerica Corp. at a special meeting today approved an amendment to the concern's certificate of incorporation changing its authorized 50,000,000 shares of $25 par value to the same number of shares without par value. Vote on the amendment was unanimous.

INSPECTORS ON OUTING

This is a big day for the construction inspectors of the city building department. They are all members of the New England Building Officials' conference and today they are attending the annual outing at Lakewood, R. I.

JONES WRITES NOVEL

"Josh" Jones, associate editor of the City Record, official organ of the municipal government, spends his evenings writing fiction and historical novels. He has just completed a novel based on the life of Capt. Quelch, notorious pirate, who was hanged in Boston for piracy in 1704.

GALLAGHER RECUPERATING

City Councillor "Eddie' Gallagher of Brighton has been discharged from St. Elisabeth's Hospital after nearly two weeks and is recuperating at his summer place in Scituate.

JOE'S A TRAFFIC COP

"Joe," five-year-old son of City Councillor "Jim" Hein of Allston, hopes to be a traffic cop when he grows up. Each Sunday morning after the 11:30 mass at St. Gabriel's Monastery, Brighton, he helps Traffic Officer "Danny" Donahue direct traffic and protect worshippers from the menace of reckless motorists.

HORAN MAY RUN

John Horan, South Boston druggist, is another of those who are said to aspire to a seat in the city council from Ward 7. Should he take such a step he will receive strenuous opposition from City Councillor "Bill" Lynch, who will seek re-election.

TOM CURLEY BOOMED

Present indications are that City Councillor "Al" Fish of Ward 16, Dorchester, will not find it as easy to return to office as he thought. A group of youthful "pols" of that district is booming Tom Curley, who was mentioned as a candidate for Mayor in 1929.

BRICKLEY MANAGES CLUB

POST, GATTY TO ATTEND

City Councillor Peter Murray of Forest Hills, who has been arguing the merits of wrestling as a sport for the past decade, was jubilant when he learned that Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, round-the-world fliers, are to attend the matches at Boston Garden tonight. "Pete" contends that wrestling is the only real sport and that it is a he-man's game.

FOUR NAMED BY MAYOR

Four well-known Bostonians have been given temporary appointments in the park department by Mayor Curley. They are Paul E. Parker of 40 Jamaicaway, Massachusetts Institute of Technology graduate, who becomes an engineer; Benjamin H. French of 81 Bates st., Roslindale, who got his degree from Lowell Institute, and who has also been appointed an engineer; Samuel Shuman of 602 Walk Hill st., Mattapan, appointed draftsman, and John B. Deary of 84 Forbes st., Jamaica Plain, appointed rodman. They will serve for six months.

KENNEY TO NAME WARDEN

State Director of Fisheries and Game Raymond J. Kenney expects to announce the appointment this week of the new chief warden of the division. Prior to his promotion to his directorship the position of chief warden was held by Kenney. At the present time Carl G. Bates is acting chief warden.

MacDONALD ON JOB

Associate Public Works Commissioner Herman A. MacDonald has been pressed into service as member of the board of appeal on compulsory automobile insurance, representing the registrar of motor vehicles. MacDonald's initial appearance on the board was greeted with one of the longest list of cases the docket has shown in many months.

SULLIVAN PLANS FIGHT

Former Rep. Charles S. Sullivan, Jr., son of Judge Sullivan of Charlestown, is going to make a big fight in the next campaign for the state senate seat now occupied by Senator John P. McGLUE WELL AGAIN

Charles H. McGlue, former chairman of the Democratic State Committee, is back at his old haunts again after an operation that confined him to a hospital for two weeks. He says he is fit again and ready to take on all comers.

AID OF HEARST PAPERS ASKED

By CHARLES L. ABERNATHY

Democrat, Representative in Congress from North Carolina.

Distributed by Universal Service.

Washington, July 21—Relative to William Randolph Hearst's program (a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan) for the employment of labor, I am not sufficiently advised yet as to the wisdom of such a project, and I do not know enough about the details of it to say whether I would favor this particular proposition at this time.

However, I do wish to make this observation in this connection. That if Mr. Hearst will give us the full influence of his powerful papers for a complete change of administration from the presidency down, I think we could then bring about a change in conditions.

We have had so much trouble in the past undertaking to pass beneficial legislation through Congress, and having to conform this to the wishes of the executive, so as to get through any kind of relief measure, and as a result we have a situation that confronts the country today that I am not at all hopeful of working out anything beneficial under the present setup at Washington.

American Freed by Chinese Bandits

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Haggard and worn from an all night vigil on the bridge, while his ship plunged through a dense fog, Capt. T. L. Proud brought the United Fruit Co. steamer Oradell into Long Wharf where she is discharging 32,210 stems of bananas, 125 bags of cocoanuts and 4 crates of limes. Fog was encountered off the Massachusetts coast. It remained thick all the way to Boston Lightship when, the captain stated, it lifted.

WELSH COAL

Welch anthracite will be brought to the port of Boston in the French steamer Tours, under charter for transporting the coal, which arrived from Sawansea and will dock at a Chelsea coal pier. She had 5,960 tons of coal in her holds.

SUGAR CARGO

EX-HUB SHIP

Recently sold by the New England Co. of Boston, the four masted schooner Mary Bradford Pierce has been reported breaking up on the rocks off Cape Smoly, 60 miles north of Sydney, N. S., where she went aground in fog Thursday. Vincent Mullins, agent of the Department of Marine, at Sydney, states the vessel's crew are salvaging all removable parts. She was bound for Campbellton, when she went aground.

TREE STUMPS

Two large tree stumps drifting in the transatlantic shipping lanes and affording an obstruction to navigation have been reported by the commander of the United States steamer Child in a wireless to the Navy Yard at Charlestown. The stumps were seen in latitude 48:18 and longitude 70:55.

X-RAY

Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely free to all who call before July 26th. The wonderful power of the X-ray and mercury quartz light treatment is accomplishing wonders in diseases of every description. No matter what your disease may be, remember Daniel J. Walsh, M. D., fulfills the above offer.

STOMACH TROUBLE

Mrs. Mary Reardon, 650 E. 6th St., So. Boston, says: "I am 72 years old. For the past three years I suffered very much from stomach trouble. I was compelled to spend a great part of my time in bed, with pains around my heart and shoulder blades. A local doctor failed to relieve me. A neighbor, Wm. Walsh, told me how Dr. Walsh had helped him when he suffered much as I did. I had Dr. Walsh treat me and soon was a great booster for Dr. Walsh. I told all my friends how much Dr. Walsh had helped me. I took my daughter to Dr. Walsh, and she, too, sings Dr. Walsh's praises. I permit the publication of this testimonial gladly, in the hope of helping others who suffer as I did."

(Signed) Mrs. Mary Reardon.

"Up to Our Neck"

The action of President Hoover in ordering Secretary of State Stimson to London to represent the United States at the conference of European Cabinet members with the status "exactly the same as the Prime Ministers" is indeed a SORRY ONE for this republic.

For the first time since the Peace Conference of Versailles the United States is a FULL PARTICIPANT in a MAJOR DISCUSSION of EUROPEAN STRIFE, BITTERNESS, JEALOUSIES, RIVALRIES, WITH WHICH WE SHOULD HAVE NO CONCERN.

"It," says the New York Herald Tribune, "comes as a dramatic reminder of the drift from our traditional foreign policy forced upon us by recent events."

Mr. Hoover, a Wilson internationalist and a would-be British subject, has shelved the "Unofficial Observer," and in this international conference we are there "FULLY WITH THE OTHERS," according to the New York Times.

This same, un-American Times, always a pleader for the cause of internationalism, rejoices at the Hoover departure from the traditions of the Founders of the Republic, as was to be expected.

It says:

"Let us hope that this marks the final disappearance of our somewhat discredited friend the 'Unofficial Observer' from the United States in international conferences. When we are UP TO OUR NECK AS WE ARE IN TROUBLED EUROPEAN WATERS it is just as well to have the fact frankly conceded, in place of pretending that our delegates are simply passing by in a pleasure boat."

The New York Evening Post sees the President "IN FOR IT, as an anti-isolationist."

"The Administration," according to Senator Reed, Pennsylvania, Hoover spokesman, "does not intend that the American representatives shall discuss political questions or participate in the settlement of them."

But how can our representatives avoid discussing European politics?

The answer is THEY CANNOT.

For so woven into the warp and woof of every economical question to come before the conference are the European politics behind them that our representatives WILL discuss European politics because they CANNOT AVOID THEM.

And thus the people of this nation, after having repeatedly and overwhelmingly repudiated any attempt to embroil this republic in foreign entanglements, now find themselves thrust UP TO THE NECK in the European turmoil, thanks to the internationally-minded Mr. Hoover.

While we have never lost a war, we have never won a conference. And this conference at London will thrust us STILL DEEPER INTO THE EUROPEAN MIRE.

The European sympathies against which Washington warned us and which involved us in the last war WILL INVOLVE US in the next one.

The established policy of the Hearst papers has been to oppose all participation by this country in European complications as inevitably leading to our involvement in the next war FOR WHICH ALL EUROPE IS PREPARING.

"The beginning of all understanding of the European situation on this side of the Atlantic must be the perception that what exists in Europe today is not peace BUT WAR, although at the moment the conflict is carried on by all other means than arms. The French and German people are engaged in a life and death struggle over the peace treaty. For the French the issue is national security, for the Germans national existence. Moreover, in French statesmen there is disclosed the same will that French soldiers revealed at Verdun.

". . . But once in power (in Germany) the Fascists have no choice but to repudiate the Treaty of Versailles and reopen the question of the eastern frontiers in some violent fashion. THIS INVOLVES AN ATTACK UPON POLAND, BUT FRANCE IS BOUND TO SUPPORT POLAND AND CZECHOSLOVAKIA TO MARCH WITH FRANCE.

"Europe is thus drifting toward ANOTHER WAR, just as it drifted into the World War in 1914. In point of fact, so far as Germany is concerned, the war has been in progress since the election in Germany last September. Moreover, if there is any solid basis for belief that the tragedy can be averted, it must rest upon the possibility that the peoples of the world will not be now, as they were in 1914, left in ignorance of the gravity of the crisis until hope of resolving it has completely passed.

It is entanglement in this "worst crisis since 1914" that our internationally-minded Mr. Hoover has thrust us.

LET US MIND OUR OWN BUSINESS AND STAY OUT OF EUROPEAN AFFAIRS AND STAND RELIGIOUSLY BY THE POLICIES OF THE FOUNDERS OF THE REPUBLIC!

Roxbury Celebrates

"Every citizen of Roxbury who has any regard for the welfare of the district in which he lives should take an active part in the coming Old Home Week celebration."

So says a district newspaper in a strong appeal to the civic pride of the people.

An excellent series of entertainments has been organized, beginning with the great banquet to be held in Intercolonial Hall on Monday night, July 27, and concluding with the Roxbury Day parade to be held the following Saturday.

Roxbury has no need to feel itself overshadowed by any proximity to Boston. It has enough prideful history of its own to celebrate and memorialize.

Old Home Week is an institution which owes its conception to New England. Anything that can renew old friendships and revive old sentiments is worthy the enthusiastic participation of every resident.

Paris Always Offers Unusual Contacts

PARIS, July 21—Paris always offers the unusual in human contact. Dining at the next table in a cafe in rue Duphot last night was an obvious mid-westerner—lonely and a bit g a . r ulous. He apologized for the carafe of vin ordinaire by explaining c h a m pagne gave him "the heart-burn."

He inquired where I might be from. I told him that originally I was from Missouri. "I'm a mite further west," he said, and added, "Colorado." After a few generalities he inquired my business and, being just as curious, I asked him. "I'll give you 700 guesses and $1000 if you guess it," he replied.

Right away I gave up, and it was a good thing, too. He sells glass eyes by mail. For a quarter of a century he has carried on what he calls a Fit-U-at-Home Plan of disposing of artificial optics. For a few moments I thought I was being subjected to a gentle kidding.

But from his pocket he extracted some circulars and eye charts glorifying himself—C. E. Biel, of Denver—as "the biggest distributor of artificial eyes in the world." Then he warmed to his subject. He had entered the business because his wife had lost an eye and had difficulty being fitted properly.

He advertises chiefly in farm and small town papers and out of a collection of 80,000 eyes he manages, he says, to please the customer. He sends them an assortment of a dozen and if these fail to please, he sends a dozen more, and so on, until, as he expressed it, "one clicks."

The price is always $5 unless a customer desires one "blown to order." Then the price is tilted to $12. Most glass eyes are manufactured in Germany and he has been in that country visiting the manufacturers. I inquired if the depression had affected the glass eye business. He said it had.

Ordinarily a customer buys an eye every two years—if affluent, an extra one, like a spare tire. But orders are slumping. Suddenly he tossed a sample on my table, a leering, slightly blood-shot eye—perhaps for morning wear. Just as suddenly I lost all interest in my five franc fifty dessert. . .

* * *

No strip of Paris is so vitally and electrically alive at night as the grand boulevards from the Place de la Opera to the Bastille. The sidewalks are a bright gush of cafe lights. The acres of outside tables are filled and the pavements are packed with promenaders. It is the Paris that makes one forget the backwaters of black and depressing streets that thread the town like ugly, shotted veins.

* * *

My garcon for breakfast was a young fellow with a Valentino profile and the shy gentility of his native Russia. There are thousands of them here—aristocrats shunted to obscurity. I asked if he ever expected to return to his country. "Not," he said, "unless one may visit the scenes one loves after death."

The luxury mart of the world—the rue de la Paix,—home of Cartier's, Worth, Reboux, etc., expresses a pronounced droop. Its fashionable shops are just as briskly enticing. The crowds drift through its three short blocks' length but do not stop. Through windows one sees sad-eyed clerks. No other section of Paris has been so badly hit.

* * *

Driving along Montparnasse toward The Dome this afternoon I heard a screaming "Hello!" and looked back to see a waving figure at the curb. It was S. J. Kaufman, former New York columnist and now a citizen of the world. We foregathered at a Dome table to watch the flow of humanity passing that is the oddest in the world. Rachitic wrecks swathed in rags, winking Viennese and French cocottes, hapless boys with portfolios of drawings, wide-hatted, whiskered artists with floppy ties and equally floppy morals, purple-nosed toy sellers, pock-marked villains, introverts, extroverts, panderers—the stagnant, thick scum of a world in perversion.

* * *

A black suited and black necktied Dome waiter—funereally prophetic of the fate of h a bitues, —dropped a card on my table. It was soiled and the name inked out. On the reverse side was s c r awled: "Remember Kiefaber? Happy Days!" It was a restaurant I used to patronize in Dayton, O. I looked about for a familiar face, but saw none.

And in the tremulous twilight my wife and I crossed the Seine to Parc St. Cloud to stroll on the velvety softness of dead leaves from century old maples. French fashion, we walked with an arm around waists. But an unromantic root upset my Elysium, tripping me into a ludicrous squat.

Gift From Heaven

Does your gift from Heaven give you all the money that you need?
Does he bring men home for dinner when but two you'd planned to feed?

Does your gift from Heaven always do exactly as he should?
Does he hang up his pajamas or just leave them where he stood?
As a husband have you thought him in his manners rather slack?
Well, he's now your gift from Heaven! Would you like to send him back?

Does he whistle while he's shaving? Does he toss his things about?
Does he frequently annoy you by the silly things he'll do?
Then remember, little lady, he was Heaven's gift to you.

A scientist has told us that he thoroughly believes
And I know the men will hail him as a friend, but I shall fear
To quote my Heavenly rating, for I know she'll say: "My dear,
You may be a gift from somewhere, but you can't be Heaven sent,
The professor's made an error—'twas the other place he meant."

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

1. 1902 — First steamboat on Mississippi.
2. 1849 — Telephone invented.
3. 1914 — Cuba made free.
4. 1811 — Gold rush to California.
5. 1876 — German invasion of Belgium.

Do you know:

6. Who wrote: "Tell me where is fancy bred, Or in the heart, or in the head"?
7. What name is given to 12 dozen?
8. What Irishman was an American Revolutionary naval hero?
9. What important invention was made 100 years ago this year?
10. What was the most famous transatlantic flight of 1930?

1. Cuba made free. 2. Gold rush to California. 3. German invasion of Belgium. 4. First steamboat on Mississippi. 5. Telephone invented. 6. Shakespeare. 7. Gross. 8. John Barry. 9. Reaper invented by McCormick. 10. The non-stop flight from Paris to New York by Coste and Bellonte in the Question Mark.

Scotland and Liquor; Hoover and Dawes

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

WE HAVE IT from the cable news that in Scotland the consumption of spirituous liquors has steadily decreased.

The Scot turned to hard liquor, just as the early settlers of New England and other rugged climates.

The experience of generations has taught him that excessive use of liquor commands heavy penalties, such as poverty and crime, not to mention the exacting debilities of the morning after.

That was exactly the experience of New England and the other sections of the country until the government and the fanatics thought they could bludgeon temperance into a free people.

Prohibition produced not only graft, corruption, banditry and contempt of law. It erased the remarkable progress the people were making in true temperance under the leadership of Father Mathew and other splendid characters in other denominations.

A Political Mystery

'Twas not always thus.

Dawes, you will remember, was Vice-President of the United States and lifted that office out of its traditional anonymity.

He got in bad with Coolidge by raising a row with the Senate over its rules, and he got in bad with the Administration as a whole—in fact he was accused of treachery—by quietly advocating the McNary-Haugen legislation for relief of farmers, which Coolidge vetoed.

When Hoover was nominated at Kansas City, Dawes was hopeful he would be renominated for Vice-President. Secretary of the Interior Work was Hoover's floor manager and campaign director at the convention. I asked him about Dawes for second place. He replied, with a positiveness akin to anger:

"He's the one man we won't take for Vice-President."

* * *

Dawes was aware of the Hoover crowd's animosity to him and of their refusal to give him renomination. Yet, when they later offered him the Ambassadorship to Great Britain, he accepted it with alacrity. Some men create the impression they are terrific, unyielding fighters. Why they will accept a positive snub on one day and a minor favor from the same hand on the next day is one of the unfathomable mysteries of modern politics.

* * *

Defense Costs

The World Peace Foundation, headquartered here in Boston, shows that the United States is spending more than any other Nation for national defense — $700,000,000 last year.

France and Germany, with a third of our population, are spending more than half of what we expend.

But that does not tell all the story, either.

Prices of labor and materials are much higher here. Which means that the other nations get more soldiers and sailors, more ships, planes, submarines and munitions dollar for dollar.

The fact is they've got them. France has the army, planes and submarines, England the navy.

* * *

Power Trust Methods

He gave to both parties. Whatever the outcome he was going to be on the winning side.

In this country the game is identical, only constant practice has made it a finer art. The generous donor does not get CAUGHT giving to both parties as a rule. He usually gives to one party in his own name and selects a DUMMY contributor to hand it over to the opposing party.

But he collects, either way. It may be a tariff schedule, a government contract, or, being socially ambitious, he may decide upon an Ambassadorship for himself.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

The Apricots Are Rotting

Elsie Robinson

Makes you sick to see it. Good fruit like that, going to waste. Makes Jim sick, too, but he can't do anything about it. No use picking it. Wouldn't make a cent. Wouldn't even break even. All over America, fruit rotting. All over America, m a in ourished, rickety children who never get a taste of fresh fruit.

Terrible! But don't blame it on "the depression." We've been doing it for years. Every year it gets worse.

The Russians think they know why. They say it's because we have no plan . . . that each man raises or makes what he wants without a plan . . . and since it is all done by private capital, the government couldn't enforce a plan, even if it had one.

There is a little book called "New Russia's Primer," written for school children of 12 to 14 years, by M. Ilin. It tells those Russian school children about American Waste. It tells about rotting apricots, and farmers burning corn instead of coal, and potatoes spoiling in the ground while children go hungry.

It tells a story about Hats, to illustrate our American way of doing things . . . about how Mr. Fox and Mr. Box and Mr. Nox and Mr. Cox all decided to make hats. And how they went on making hats, madly, recklessly, without a plan, until stores and factories were swamped with hats and no one bought hats any more. Then, of course, the factories closed down, the good machinery rusted, thousands of men were thrown out of work, their children went hungry, and Messrs. Fox, Box, Nox and Cox went bankrupt. Until, presently, the old hats wore out, new hats were needed, new factories were built and the whole vicious, silly circle of waste started again.

That—say the Russians—is the result of private working without a plan. "And it can all be helped, children, if people will work together, cut out private capital, have a central government and a plan like our Five Year Plan.

As you read that story about Hats, you will grow very uncomfortable. You will have to admit it is true, but it will make you mad to admit it. You will be furious because the Russians are teaching their children things like that about America. You will be even more furious when you see that they quote one of our own leading writers to support their case. Stuart Chase in his "TRAGEDY OF WASTE."

You will read that in 1920 "thousands of gallons of milk were poured into the rivers and creeks of southern Illinois."

You will read on and on. With each word you will get madder. Finally you will say—

"Pooh, that's just a lot of talk! America's all right. There's nothing wrong with the way we do things in America. They shouldn't let those Russians—or those fool writers—talk like that about America."

Then you'll throw that book down, hard, and walk outside.

And outside, what will you see? You will see Jim Allen's apricots rotting on the trees.

And then what will you say?
